e a la analiza pela propia de la composición del composición de la composición de la composición del composición de la composición del composición de la composición del composición del composición de la composición del composición del composición del composición del composición del composición del c

is in the second of the second

My medited till oneeirrich -By H. Blochmann, Esq. M. A.,

Contributions to Persian Lexicography.—By H. BLOCHMANN, Esq. M. A.,

Assistant Professor, Calcutta Madrasah.

[Received 11th April, 1868.]

One of the greatest lexicographical undertakings which so eminently distinguish our present time, is Lanc's Arabic Dictionary. The Arabic student who hitherto had at nearly every step to supply or correct his meagre vocabularies, finds in it all he can desire. The learned natives of India who had looked upon Fírúzábádí as insurpassable, are astonished to hear of a Madd i Qámús. England may indeed be proud of a work which marks an epoch in the history of Arabic learning in Europe.

We trust that the standard which Lane's Dictionary has created, will soon be followed by a compiler of a Persian Dictionary. There exists no reliable Persian Dictionary. Nothing worth the name has been done for Persian lexicography since the days of Castelli and Meninski. This is a matter of surprise, as there are most excellent sources from which a good Persian dictionary could be compiled. The deficiency of all existing dictionaries lies in this, that the compilers, one and all, have used secondary or tertiary sources, instead of having recourse, as Lane did, to original and carefully selected native works.

The sources for compiling a reliable Persian dictionary are the lexicographical works written by Indians. In India, as in Túrán, Persian has been a subject of study and the medium of education. The value of the Indian dictionaries is fully acknowledged by the Persians themselves. Surúrí's Majma'ulfurs is indeed the only dictionary written by a Persian, which a compiler will have to consult; and even this book is half Indian. The number of Irání lexicographists is small. The better dictionaries written before A. D. 1400 are mostly of Túránian origin. The very first Persian dictionary was written at Soghd. With 1400 the period of the Indian dictionaries commences. Each is an improvement upon the preceding; in each we find the number of words and quotations steadily increasing, till we see them culminating in the Farhang i Jahángírí, which brought the old Túrání and Irání dictionaries into oblivion. The practical vocabulary, ontitled Burhán i Qátí', which has been acknowledged to be the closes the first period, the period of gathering, A. D. 1400 to 1652.

With Rashidi commences the second epoch of the Indian dictionaries. The two dictionaries of this period, though the period of criticism. not yet used by European compilers, must be the basis of a critical dictionary of the Persian language. Rashidi's Farhang—let compilers like obedient murids follow this murshid !-is a critical work on all Indian dictionaries up to the Farhang i Jahángírí, whilst the Siráj ullughát by Khán Arzú is the indispensable Vade Meeum for those who use the Burhan. The Siráj is at the same time the last dictionary of note for the classical Persian. Towards the end of the past century at last, when sufficient time had elapsed since the death of Kalím, the last poet of the silver age of Persian literature, there appeared the Muçtalahát ushshu'ará and the stupendous Bahár i 'Ajam, two works written by Hindoos on the Isti'mál i Mutaakhkharín or usage of the writers after Jámí, the last, though not the least, of the classics. The dictionaries of the present age, with the exception of the Ghiás ullughát, deserve no notice. The Shamsullughát compiled under the direction of a gentleman whose family is known in Calcutta for their liberality, and the Haft Qulzum of Lucknow are too full of typographical errors, to render their use desirable.

We may notice that nearly every province of India can point to a lexicographist. Bengal is represented by the quaint Farhang i Ibráhímí; Bahár by the Kashí; the Dekkhan by the Burhán; the North-West by the Adat, "primum in Indis," the Muayyid and the Siráj; Sirhind by the Madár; the Punjáb by the Farhang i Jahángírí and the Muctalahát ushshu'ará; Sind by Rashídí. Again, four dictionaries are dedicated to princes, and one bears Akbar's stamp.

When we compare the lexicography of the Arabs with that of the Persians, we find some remarkable differences. The Arabs have left us not only more, but they have also shewn a greater interest than the Persians for their ancient literature. Their dictionaries delight in quotations from the ancients. Persian dictionaries on the other hand abound in ancient words, for which there are no proofs, and for which it is now-a-days impossible to find proofs. This absence of proofs has caused varieties of spellings and meanings which are most perplexing. Many words are hopelessly doubtful. To distinguish such words in some way or other, is the first duty of a future compiler.

Another difference is this that in Persian dictionaries the language of the prose is not represented. All quotations are verses. Constructions of verbs with different prepositions are rarely, if ever, to be met with; phrases are never entered, unless they be poetical metaphors. Native lexicographists having thus neglected the Persian prose, modern compilers have still a field left for independent research.

II.

The sources which are absolutely required for the compilation of a reliable dictionary of the Persian language, are the following ten-

- الفضلا. written A. D. 1419. Ad. 1.
- شرفنامه, written after A. D. 1428 and before $\mathbf{2}$. Sh. 1445.
- written A. D. 1519. .Mu.
- مدار الافاضل, written A. D. 1593. 4. Ma.
- written A. D. 1608. FJ. 5.
- مجمع الفوس سووري second edition, written A. D. 1629. 6. Sur.
- برهنگ رشیدی, written A. D. 1653. 7. R.
- ,سراج اللغات written A. D. 1735. 8. Sir.
- written between A. D. 1739 & 1768. 9. Bh.
- بهار عجم غياث اللغات written A. D. 1826. Gh. 10.

I subjoin here a list of abbreviations referring to other lexicographical works, &c., mentioned below.

برهان قاطم, written A. D. 1652. В. written A. D. 1742. F. شمس اللغات, printed A. D. 1806. SHL. مفت قلزم, printed A. D. 1822. HK.

V. Vullers' Lexicon Persico-Latinum, Bonn 1855.

A.A. آئين اکبري, by the author in the Bibliotheca Indica.

The Burhán ought not to be used by future compilers except as a guide for the arrangement of the words.

The sources used by the authors of the ten works which I consider absolutely necessary for the compilation of a reliable dictionary of the Persian language, are mostly forgotten. Many of them perhaps no longer exist; others are only to be found in the libraries of Europe. The abbreviations in the following alphabetical list of the sources of the ten shew by whom they were used.

بغدي مغدي ابو الحفص سغدي, FJ., Sur. 1. 2. فرهنگ ابو المنصور على بن احمد , Ad., FJ., Sur. بن منصور الاسدى الطوسى فرهنگ ايراهيمي 3. FJ. This appears to be another dictionary than No. 28.

فرهنك آداة الفضلا 4. Sh., Mu., Ma., FJ., Sur. Vide below.

فرهنگ استاد عدد الله ندشايوري FJ.

فرهنگ اسکندری 6. FJ. Vide 10.

فرهنگ برهان قاطع 7. Sir., Bh., Gh.

, فهنگ بهار عجم 8. Gh. Vide below.

فهنك تحقة الأحداب تصنيف 9. حافظ أوبهي

فرهذك تحفة السعادة تاليف مولانا

FJ., Sur.

, محمود بن شيخ ضياء الدين محمد

Sur., and Ma. who mentions it as از كتب متأخرين. The Ma. calls it تحفة السعادة سكذدرى; hence it may be the same as No. 6.

11. فرهنگ جامع لغات منظوم نيازي حجازي, FJ., Sur. who found in some MSS. ججازي instead of بخارى فرهنگ جهانگيري, Sur., R., B., Sir., Gh. Vide 12.

چراغ هدایت, Gh. Vide below. 13.

14. فرهنگ کسینی وفائی الله الله الله الله الله الله الله الل
16 , فرهنگ حسيني , FJ. 17. لله الله الله الله الله الله الله
17. فرهنگ دستور الافاضل بالافاضل الله الله الله الله الله الله الله ا
 الفضائد الفضائد المنصور الفضائد الله الله الله الله الله الله الله الل
 بفرهنگ رسالة النصير Ad., FJ. بفرهنگ رشيدي Sir., Bh., Gh. Vide below. بهفت بخسی تصنیف بدرالدین Sh., Mu., Ma. who mentions it as باز کتب متقدمین FJ., Sur. My MSS. of the Ma. have المشهور بپذیر بیخشی بیخشی المشهور بپذیر بیخشی بی
كوهنگ رشيدى كار المشهور Sir., Bh., Gh. Vide below. كار المشهور كار كار كار كار كار كار كار كار كار كا فرهنگ زفانگویا جهان پویا المشهور Sh., Mu., Ma. who mentions it as از کتب متقدمین FJ., Sur. My MSS. of the المشهور بپذیر بیخشی Ma. have بهفت بخشی تصنیف بدرالدین بهفت بخشی تصنیف بدرالدین به بخشی تصنیف بدرالدین به بخشی تصنیف بدرالدین به باز کتب متقدمین Sh., Mu., Ma. who mentions it as باز کتب متقدمین FJ., Sur. My MSS. of the Ma. have المشهور بپذیر بخشی راز کتب متقدمین tions it as FJ., Sur. My MSS. of the المشهور بپذیر بیخشی Ma. have FJ., Sur. My MSS. of the Ma. have المشهور بيذي بخشى المشهوربيذير بخشى Ma. have المشهور بيليج بحشى Ma. have
22. فرهنگ ساماني R.
23. Gh. Vide below.
على الله الله الله الله الله الله الله B., Gh.
فوهنگ سعدي بن نصير بن طاهر بن تعيم .25
الغزنويكة بنآم خواجة نظام الملك نوشتة
و آن یک هزار و دریست و پذیج لغت است
و مسمی بسخینامهٔ نظامی FJ .
كتاب شامل اللغات تاليف قرا حصاري 26.
,که معانی لغات را بقرکی نوشته Sur.
شرح سامي قي الأسامي العيداني Sur.
فوهنگ شرفنامهٔ احمد شنیری تالیف 🙎
Mu., Ma., FJ., Sur. Vide , ابواهيم قوام فاروقي
below.
بنرهنگ شینخزاده عاشق FJ.
29. فرهنگ شیخ زاده عاشق FJ. 30. وفرهنگ شیخ زاده عاشق FJ. This is the Kashf-ullughát; vide below.
31. فرهنگ شينج صحمه بهاري FJ.
B. مستحاح الادوية تصنيف حسين الانصاري . 32
33. FJ.
34. بفرهنگ عاصمي FJ.
35. FJ. Perhaps also Ma.,
who quotes a dictionary
•
called in my MSS.
called in my MSS. فرهنگ علمي . FJ. فرهنگ عجائب

vide below.

Ad., Sh., Ma., FJ.

Ma., FJ., Sur. Vide

FJ.

Sir.

below.

46.47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52.

tini

6

37.

38.

39.

40.

41.

42.

43.

44.

45.

53.

54.

55.

57.

59.

60. 61.

62.

63.

,فرهنگ منصور شیرازی فرهنگ مولانا مبارك شاه غزنوي مشهور

, فرهنگ مونسي , فوهنگ موزيد الفضلا

بفخر قواس

The last work is written by Muhammed Badruddín, better known as Abú Naçr i Faráhí, of Farah, a town in Sijistán. The book which has often been printed in India, is an ancient vocabulary in rhyme, and is used in nearly every school in India. There exist who lived at صحمد بن فصيم دشت بياضي who lived at the time of Akbar, يوسف بن مانع, and ينظام هروى.

The above list of Persian Dictionaries does not give the names of two dictionaries , فرهنگ حل لغات الشعرا and the فرهنگ تبختری often quoted by the Madár; but I suspect they are mentioned above under a different name.

III.

After having specified the sources of the ten most valuable dictionaries, I add a few notes on several of them. The notes are necessarily short, as the subject matter of a dictionary is almost entirely independent of the character and mind of the compiler. I trust, however, that the remarks will be of some value, as they are the result of six years' lexicographical studies. With the exception of Surúrí's Majma'ulfurs the notes refer to Indian works.

1. كاداة الفضلا . 1.

This Dictionary is compiled by عاضى خان بدر صحمد of Delhi. author adds to his name the words المتعروف بدهار وال was written in A. H. 822, or A. D. 1419, more than twenty years after the sack of Delhi by Taimúr. The book is rather a vocabulary than a dictionary; the first part contains Persian words, and the second Persian phrases. The words are arranged according to the first, second, and last letters. No examples are given. For ancient Persian words, especially for such for which there are no proofs, the Adát is of some importance. Otherwise the value of the book is rather historical. MSS. are rare, شرفنامهٔ ابراهیمی 2. The name of the author is إبراهيم قوام فاروقي; hence his dictionary is sometimes called فرهنگ ابراهیمی. He was a disciple of the famous saint Sharafuddín Ahmad of Munair, a town in Bahár, to whose honor the compiler called his work Sharafnámah. He says in the preface (metre Mutaqárib)—

سرایا که مملو ز در دری است شرفنامهٔ احمد منیری است

"The Sharafnámah of Ahmad i Munyarí is a dress of honor, filled "with the pearls of the Darí-Persian." Hence the dictionary is best known under the name of Sharafnámah i Ibráhímí. It must not be confounded with the Farhang i Mirzá Ibráhím, a later dictionary used by the authors of the FJ. and Sur.

The birthplace of Ibráhím is unknown. It is however clear that he was an Indian; for like the Adát he gives many Hindee equivalents, and mentions Indian pronunciations of Persian words. He lived some time in Persia, and has thus been able to add words and meanings which he heard from natives. He names several times a Shaikh Wáhidí of Shíráz, and an Amír Shihábuddín Hakím, of Kirmán, whose remarks he enters. Thus پشماق بالفتے اسب و این تسامع است از امیر شهاب الدین حکیم کرمانی The dictionary must have been written during the time of Bárbak, who reigned in Bengal from A. D. 1428 to 1445, as it ends with the following verses (metre Ramal)—

بو المظفر باربک شه شاه عالم باد وهست در نگین او همیشه ملك جم باد وهست دائما ورد زبان فتع هست و هم ظفر بو المظفر باربک شه شاه عالم باد وهست

The work consists of a short treatise on Persian and Turkish terminations, a large number of Persian words and phrases, interspersed with a few Arabic nouns and infinitives, and a collection of Chagatái words. The latter are given separately at the end of each façl of Persian words, which arrangement has been followed in the next dictionary and the Madár.

In using the dictionary we have to look to the first, last, and second letters of the words. Examples of verses are frequent. The MS. of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, No. 1332,—by no means a good one—has an appendix containing the Turkish numerals, and a list of Persian metres.

As a peculiarity of this dictionary, we have to mention that the compiler, though an Indian, follows in the arrangement of the words the rule of J and J is. From the time of the introduction of the Arabic characters up to the time of the poet Jámí, the last of the classics, the Irání Persian writers used the letter J is J dal, after a long J and J and J after every consonant, J, J and J after every consonant, J and J and J after every consonant, J and J and J and J after every consonant, J and J after every consonant, J and J and J and J after every consonant, J and J after every consonant, J and J and J and J after every consonant, J and J and

ور المحدود ال

The dictionary itself deserves the attention of future compilers, as it has not been sufficiently used. The author is very exact; in his explanations he pays particular attention to legendary names, especially those of the Sháhnámah, and to plants and their medical properties. MSS. are rare.

This dictionary was compiled A. H. 925, or A. D. 1519, by Shaikh Muhammad ibn i Shaikh Lád (5y) of Delhi. His object was to complete the Sharaínámah through the addition of words and phrases from the Qunyat uṭṭálibín. Hence his dictionary is more voluminous. Every façl is tripartite; first come the Arabic, then the Persian, and lastly the Turkish words. The appendix to the dictionary contains the Arabic, Persian and Turkish numerals, and a small Persian grammar. Examples of verses occur but rarely.

The arrangement is the same as in the Sharafnámah. Nothing is known of the author himself. From a remark in the preface we know that he had two children. The reigning king receives no praise; nor was Ibráhím Lódhí a fit subject for an encomium.

MSS. of this dictionary are numerous.

كشف اللغات .4

This dictionary was compiled by 'Abdurrahím ibn i Ahmad Súr of Bahár. It contains the words of the Sharafnámah and the Muayyid, and many Arabic words from the Curáh. The MSS. are numerous. There exists also a rare lithographed edition of 1264 pp. 4to., which appeared at Calcutta several decads ago. The following extract is taken from the preface—

"Should any one doubt the correctness of a Persian word in my Dictionary, let him look into the Sharainamah, the dictionary of my

"revered teacher Shaikh Muhammad Lád—May God have mercy on "him!—the Dastúr, the Dictionary by Qází Nagír uddín Gunbudzí, "the Qunyat uṭṭálibín, the Dictionary by Fakhr-i-Qawwés, the Dictionary by Amír Shihábuddín of "Kirmán, the Qáfiyah-i-Kísh, the Lisán ushshu'ará, the Iṣṭiláh "ushshu'ará, the Jámí uṣṭanáyi', and the Dictionary by Shaikh "Muhammad Khaghrí (خغری)."

The date of the compilation is not known; the work must have, however, been completed about the middle of the sixteenth century, as the author knew Shaikh Muhammad Lád, the compiler of the Muayyid (A. D. 1519). He also alludes to the Shaikh under ابن مقلع.

This dictionary gives no examples. The Kashf is of importance for those who cannot procure copies of the Sharafnámah and the Muayyid.

مدار الافاضل .5

This valuable work which has been very little used, was compiled by Mauláná Shaikh Iláhdád i Faiszí, son of Asad ul'ulamá 'Alí Shér of Sirhind. The year of the compilation, A. H. 1001, or A. D. 1593, is given in the words فيض عام, the táríkh of the book. As the words are only arranged according to the first and last letters, it is somewhat troublesome to use the book. The Arabic words stand in each façl before the Persian. The Turkish words are given after the Persian words. The Arabic words and the examples are more numerous than in the preceding works. There are a great number of verses marked by the compiler.

The author makes occasionally critical attempts, and mentions Indian pronunciations of several Persian words.

The following extracts from this dictionary will shew that the compiler was a poet. His Masnawí entitled Náz ó Niyáz must not be confounded with a Masnawí of the same title by Baqáí (No. 1240 Asiatic Society Bengal).

پورسقا صردے بود عالم ، بعشق دختر مجوسئے مغی اختیار کرد ، چون آن دختر را خواست هر دو مسلمان شدند ، اکثر مجوسیان را هدایت نمود ، غالبا شین صنعان خواهد بود که قصته او در منطق الطیر نوشته و این جامع نیز در کتاب مثنوئ ناز و نیاز آورده اا

The metre of the compiler's Masnawi is the same as of the Shirin

Khusrau, مفاعیلی مفاعیلی as will appear from the following quotation*

صنعان بوزن کاعان نام شخصے معروف که عاشق دختر ترسا شدی بود چنانچه قصه اش در مثنوی مؤلف مذکور است پلولفه په در ایام گذشته شدیخ صنعان که جمه پدر همچون پدر کنعان

MSS. of this dictionary are as common as those of the Mu. There exist, however, bad copies, where in the فصل الألف مع الله under فصل الألف مع الله, the compiler is confounded with Faiszí, the great Indian poet. In good MSS. we find—

ابو الفضل يعنى خداوند فضل و نام كاركن سلطان محمود *

Bad MSS. read-

یعنی خداوند فضل و نیز برادر خرد مصنف رحمة الله علیه که مصاحب و وزیر اکبر پادشال بود و لقب علامی داشت .

and give also verses of the poet Faiszí marked to 'Allámí is quite impossible, as he outlived his brother Faiszí. The confusion, I dare say, is to be ascribed to ignorant copyists who were mislead by the takhalluç Faiszí. The compiler clearly gives the name of his father, 'Ali Shér, of Sirhind, whilst the father of the poet is Shaikh Mubárik of Nágór. It is also evident from the preface that the compiler was a pious Muhammadan, which the poet Faiszí was certainly not.

It is noticeable that the book does not contain a single reference to Akbar.

The four MSS. at hand have a Khátimah containing grammatical rules. One has the following remark—

و ثانیا تحویریافت بتاریخ پنجم ماه شعبان در عهد سلطان السلاطین شاه جهان غازی از یه محمد امین بن غلام حسین بن شیخ ناصر برادر مؤلف غفر الله له ولوالدیه و در سده ــــ at which place the writing is so آبرسيدة, that it cannot be read.

* Vide also Vullers' Persian Dictionary, II. p. 518b. In the article صنعان correct صنعان, the author of the preceding dictionary; and for the verse of Mullá Sálik of Yazd, which in Vullers has no metre, read (metre Ramal)

بگسلانم سبحة و زنّار بندم بر ميان عشق ترسا بچهٔ خواهم که صنعانم کند

2701

مجمع الفرس سروري .6

The first edition of Surúrí's Majma'ulfurs appeared in A. H. 1008, nine years before the next dictionary. As thirty years later, A. H. 1038, a second edition appeared, we shall first notice the Farhang i Jahángírí.

فرهنگ جهانگیری .7

The title of the dictionary is a misnomer, and ought to be Farhang i Akbarí. The compiler is Nawwáb 'Aszad uddaulah Mír Jamáluddín Husain i Anjú. He is mentioned in the Kín i Akbarí, p. 226, as one of Akbar's courtiers, holding the office of a commander of nine hundred, a position not necessarily military, for which he received a monthly salary of Rs. 7100. He appears to have been a favourite of the emperor, as in 1604 he was sent to Bíjápúr to bring the daughter of 'Adil Sháh to Agra, where she was married to Prince Dániál.

From the preface of the dictionary it appears that the labours of the compiler extended over thirty years. A. H. 1000, or thirteen years after the commencement of the compilation, when Akbar was at Srínagar, Mír Jamáluddín received the order to complete his dictionary. Not only did Akbar grant sums for the purchase of manuscripts, but he even called learned men from Peria to assist Mír Jamáluddín in the compilation. The historian Badáoní indeed tells us that many a word was investigated in Akbar's majlis i khác, the emperor himself evincing that taste for the study of words which Muhammadans so eminently possess. Forty-four dictionaries of those specified above, nine others of which neither the title nor the author's name were known, commentaries, works on science, Zand and Pazand books, the whole Persian literature, yielded the words for this work. The most ancient dictionaries, of which nothing but the title seems now-a-days to exist, were in Mir Jamáluddín's hands. Among them were—the dictionary of Abú Hafe of Soghd, who according to some made the first Persian verse; * that of Asadí, Firdausí's teacher; the vocabulary of Hakím Qatrán, the quaint poet; &c. Akbar unfortunately died A. H. 1014, or A. D. 1605, before the dictionary was completed; and when at ^{*} Vide the author's edition of the Persian Metres by Saifí, p. 4.

Contributions to Persian Lexicography.

last, three years later in A. H. 1017, it made its appearance, the compiler thought fit to call it in honor of Akbar's successor Farháng i Jahángíri. The migrá' (Hazaj i musaddas) is the táríkh of the completion of the work.

The preface of the dictionary is followed by an Introduction containing twelve chapters—

- 1. On the boundaries of the land فارس.
- 2. On the Persian language.
- 3. On the letters of the Alphabet, and the rule of Jis and Jis.
- 4. On the arrangement of the words in the Farhang i Jahángírí,
- 5. On the قيد gaid adopted by the compiler.*
- 6. On the interchange of letters.
- 7. On pronominal affixes.
- 8. On certain words, as مر , بو , فوا ,به ,در .
- 9. On terminations, as فام ,همي , مند ,لاخ , &c.
- 10. On the use of the letters δ , δ , ω , ω , δ , δ , δ , δ c., as far as they are used for inflections.
 - 11. On the spelling of certain words, chiefly compounds.
 - . عقد إنامل On the .

The dictionary itself contains only single Persian words and such Persian compounds as have no iszáfat. The Khátimah is divided into five chapters or doors—

- 1. Figurative expressions.
- 2. Compounds with or without the Iszáfat, of which either one or both words are Arabic.
- 3. Words which contain any of the حروف هشتگانه, viz., أي, حار , صاد, على , عروف هشتگانه , على , خال , ضاد
 - 4. Zand and Pazand words.
 - 5. Certain rare words, chiefly proper names of towns, persons, &c.

Among the words, a few terms are found of the dialect of Shíráz, to which town the compiler appears to have belonged. The Zand

. * Eastern lexicographists describe the spelling of words, to avoid mistakes. Thus the ب is called بالى مؤحدة, the بالى with one dot; and as it can now no longer be mistaken, the letter is called مقيد muqayyad fettered. Hence قيد example of descriptive spelling.

and Pazand words form a peculiar feature. They are interesting both for the Zand scholar and the historian of Akbar's reign. The principles of toleration which no king before Akbar had dared openly to confess, had even laid hold of the philologic mind of the king's subjects, and for the first time did the words of the worshippers of "the fire which Muhammad extinguished," find a place in a dictionary, the compiler of which was moreover a Sayyid of the purest blood. Merely to flatter Akbar who, though a Sufi in his heart, was a Parsee by his rites, could not have been the compiler's sole object. Curiosity had caused some of Akbar's courtiers to learn Sanscrit, and the same curiosity taught a philologist to look upon the words of another sect of infidels as things worth knowing and registering. This is proved by the spontaneous remark made by the compiler under "It's and the same curiosity the spontaneous remark made by

In another place of his dictionary the compiler mentions a Zoro-astrian of the name of $Ardsh\acute{e}r$. Perhaps it is the same. Akbar had expressly sent for him from Kirmán, as will be seen from the following extract—

برسام * * * * شرح این لغت از مجوسی که در دین خود بغایت فاضل بود و اردشیر نام داشت و اورا مجوسیان موبد می دانستند و حضرت عرش آشیانی محض اجهت تحقیق افات فرس مبلغها از برایش فرستاده از . کرمان طلبیده بودند تحقیق نموده نوشت ۱۱

The editor of the Burhán gives likewise the Zand words; but, as far as I know, he is the only Muhammadan lexicographer who has thought it worth while to copy them.

The order of the words in the dictionary is at first sight bewildering. They are arranged according to the second letter. Thus the first باب contains all words whose second letter is alif; the second báb those whose second letter is • bé, and so on. Within each báb, the words are again alphabetically arranged. For example, سرانداز will stand in the same báb, the باب را the same báb, the سرانداز but باب will stand before, and عرف after, the word فرهنگ because مرفره sín and گرد gáf stand in the alphabet respectively before and after the MSS. of the Farhang are numerous. A good MS. may be obtained for 40 to 50 Rupees. Our Society possesses two very good ones; No. 611, marked with the muhr of Tippú Sultán, is very correct.

The worth of the dictionary is so generally recognized, that not only the general term " The Farhang" is used instead of Farhang i Jahán-gírí, but that the sources from which it was compiled have nearly all sunk into oblivion. For the pre-classical and classical times of the Persian literature, it is the completest dictionary and the richest mine of quotations. The Burhán is the Farhang without examples. Even the Turkish-Persian dictionary which Vullers has used, is chiefly based upon the Farhang, whilst the dictionaries of Rashídí and Khán Arzú are intended to correct its mistakes.

Mistakes in a dictionary are, on the whole, of less consequence, than mistakes in works on science; for supposing one of the words be wrong, no one would find it used by authors. Mistakes in meanings are more serious; and in this regard, it is well that the Farhang has been examined, partly by Surárí, but thoroughly by Rashídí and Khán Arzú. On the other hand, it was unfortunate that the Burhán, which through the printed editions of Capt. Roebuck and Vullers' Lexicon Persico-Latinum, has become best known in Europe, appeared before the critical labours of Rashídí and Khán Arzú, so that every mistake of the Farhang has been over and over again printed, or improved upon. The chief fault of the Farhang is this, that he too hastily abstracts particular meanings from the verses which he quotes. Hence the danger to which compilers are exposed that use the Farhang without giving his examples, as Burhán and Vullers have done.

The name of the author is Muhammad Qásim ibn i Hájí Muhammad of Káshán in Irán. Surúrí is his takhalluç. The author is also known as a poet and a commentator; his Arabic commentary on Sa'dí's Gulistán descrives attention. The first edition of the dictionary which appeared in A. H. 1008, or A. D. 1600, is based upon sixteen dictionaries, including the A'dát, the Sharaínámah, and the Muayyid, but is considerably smaller than the second edition which appeared thirty years later in 1038. Those who make use of Surúrí must carefully ascertain, whether they have before themselves the first or the second edition, as MSS. of both exist. This seems to have been overlooked by the Burhán. Though a very careful compiler and professing to have used Surúrí, Burhán does not give all words and meanings that are in the second edition of the Majma'ulfurs.

The MSS. of the second edition contain two prefaces. The second preface which commences with the verse (Hazaj i musaddas)

"May the Majma'ulfurs of Surúrí be indispensable to critical compilers," is very short, and stands in the MSS. which I have seen, before the original preface. Surúrí's second edition was caused by the appearance of the Farhang i Jahángírí, a copy of which, as late as in 1038, was brought to Surúrí from Hindústán. From it, as also from two other dictionaries, Surúrí has largely extracted. From the respectful manner in which he speaks of the Farhang, we might conclude that he lay under certain obligations to its author. He must have known him; else he would not call him —titles fit for a king.

He passes in silence over the blunders of the Farhang; and if on two or three places he dares openly to differ in the meaning of a word, he modestly says—

و المخاطر ابن ضعیف میرسد که این معنی خالی از تکّلفے نیست or words to this effect, although he would not so easily let off other authors.

where x

1018

Future compilers of Persian dictionaries will do well carefully to compare each word given in the Farhang with the same in Surúrí, and remember that whenever Surúrí has left out a meaning or a whole word given by the Farhang, there is, to use Rashídí's language, a خاصاً

Surúrí appears to have died in Hindústán during the reign of Sháh-jahán, as will be seen from the following extract from the khátimah of the valuable work Mir-át ul 'Alam; vide Morley's Catalogue of Historical MSS., p. 52:—

سروری اصفهانی در عهد فردوس آشیانی بهذه آمده . بعد از چذد م متوجه بیت الله گردیده در راه وفات یافت * مجمع الفرس که به فوهنگ سروری اشتهار دارد ازمؤلفات اوست * او راست بترسید از سرشگ من که باشد یتیم و خونی و از سر گذشته

"Surúrí of Içfahán came to Hindústán during the reign of Sháh"jahán. Soon after he left for Mecca, but died on the road. The "Majma'ulfurs, so famous under the name of Farhang-i-Surúrí, is "written by him. The following verse is taken from his poems (metre Hazaj):*—

* Içfahán is a mistake for Káshán. The verse is a fine example of the poetical figure called ايهام التناسب thám uttanúsub; vide Garcin de Tassy's La Rhétorique des Nations Musulmanes, p. 101. Poets compare their tears to orphans, because both are uncared for and alone. Orphans grow up to be thieves and murderers (خوني); hence Yatím means also the same as rahzan. But tears also are خون الودة or خون الودة, and flow from the eyes (از سر عيدُذرد), whilst robbers are daring and unmindful of their lives,

"Fear my tear; for it is a wicked orphan, a tyrant, a reckless one."

MSS. of Surúrí's dictionary are scarce; the excellent MS. preserved in the Fort William College Library was bought at the high price of Rs. 100.

The title مجمع الفرس means مجمع لغات فرس. The first edition was dedicated to Sultán Abul Muzaffar 'Abbás Bahádur Khán, king of Persia.

مجمع اللغات خاني 9.

This dictionary was compiled at Delhi in A. H. 1053, or A. D. 1643, by Ni'matullah al Husainí of Shíráz. His takhalluç is مالي waçlí. In his preface he praises Nawwáb Makramat Khán, a vizier of Sháhjahán, to whom the word خانى refers. The author has not specified his sources; but on examination it will be found that the dictionary is almost the same as the second edition of Surárí, somewhat shortened, with a few meanings from the Farhang i Jahángírí. The introduction contais a small Persian grammar likewise copied from the Farhang. The book is a fine example of wholesale plagiarism, and is therefore deservedly but little known. MSS. are very rare; the MS. of our Society, No. 304, is very fair.

The arrangement of the words is the same as in Surúrí. Vullers' F. occasionally quotes this dictionary, as under جماق.

برهان قاطع 10.

This Dictionary is well known. The first edition was printed in 1818 at Calcutta by Captain Roebuck, and the third and last, with a few corrections, in 1834 by Hakím 'Abdul Majíd. The name of the compiler is Muhammad Husain of Tabríz; Burhán is his takhalluç. He completed the dictionary in A. D. 1652, or A. H. 1063, as indicated by the taríkh كتاب نافع برهان قاطع, and dedicated it to a contemporary of Sháhjahán, Sultán 'Abdullah Qutbsháh of the Dekkhan, where for a time he must have lived. Hence he prefers Dekhan synonyms; thus under تباشير he says:—

ال را از درون ني هندى بر صى آورند كه بانبو باشد اا where the FJ. has—از ميان ني هندى كه آنوا بانس و بنبو گويند برآيد—Burhán's object was to compile a practical vocabulary without giving examples. In adopting the order of words as followed in our dictionaries, he arranged them more conveniently than any preceding lexicographer had done. Nearly all subsequent dictionaries follow Burhán's arrangement. His sources were the FJ., the first edition of Sur., the Surmah i Sulaimání and the Çiháh uladwiyah. MSS. of the last two are not obtainable here; but they cannot be very valuable, as the Burhán contains nothing which is not in the Farhang or Surúrí. Burhán is a careful compiler; only a few words that are given in the Farhang, appear to have been omitted. As an example I may mention بنا اول مفتوح پنبه باشد. If Burhán had omitted the useless meanings of the Farhang, his compilation would be more useful than it is.

The printed editions of Capt. Roebuck and Hakím 'Abdul Majíd are accompanied by appendices of words not given in the Burhán. These appendices which are known under the name of Mulhaqát i Burhán, are not written by Burhán, nor are they found in numerous MSS. of the dictionary; but were made under the direction of Capt. Roebuck from the works of several lexicographers of the 18th and even of the beginning of the 19th century. They are untrustworthy and full of the most glaring blunders. Vullers has embodied them; but we trust that no lexicographer after him will use them. Whatever good they contain, will be found in the original dictionaries written after Burhán.

Burhán's dictionary has produced in India a good deal of critical discussion. During this decade, a book was printed in Delhi, written by Asad ullah Khán, known also under the name of Mirzá Naushah and, as a poet, under the takhalluc of غالب. The author is the best Persian writer which India now-a-days possesses. We have from his pen a collection of letters, called پنج آهنگ, a Díwán, a historical book on Indian kings, entitled סקע iيم , and also a book written in preclassical Persian on the Indian mutiny of 1857, entitled دستنبو. The name of the book in which he attacks Burhán, has the title It has seriously damaged his reputation as a critical. قاطع برهاف Throughout the book he is abusive, and even obscene. Burhán whom he styles دکهنی or این سرد الکذی, is throughout represented as an independent lexicographer, although Burhán in his preface Hence فقير جامع لغات و تابع ارباب لغت است نه واضع Hence most of Ghálib's attacks are easily refuted by turning up the Farhang or Surúrí. But his book is also full of wilful misstatements, whilst some of his etymologies are even from a native point of view unscholar-like. He has been well taken to task by Aghá Ahmad 'Alí, of Dacca, one of the Persian teachers of the Calcutta Madrasah. His reply is entitled عروب المعارف المعارفة Muayyid i Burhán, and was printed two years ago at Calcutta. The writer shews a spirit of critical enquiry and scientific truthfulness, which is but rarely met with in native writers. Some of his articles, as القش المخاربة المعارفة ال

From a perusal of this reply, it appears that of the four hundred words which Ghálib attacked, about thirty are Burhán's own blunders, and sixty others must be called doubtful words, because they are given in the Farhang and Surúrí without proof. Several other mistakes have been discovered by the author of the Siráj (vide below); but on the whole, the number of mistakes made by Burhán himself is so small, as not to endanger his reputation of a careful compiler. A few were also corrected by Capt. Roebuck in the foot notes of his printed edition. Ghálib's rejoinder which appeared in 1867 under the title تنافق أنه a mistake. He tries in vain to shift the ground by discussing extraneous matter, and thinks to defeat his opponent by giving on the last page of his books the seals and facsimiles of several influential men, even Nawábs, living at present at Delhi, who, he says, agree with his statements. The A'ghá's second rejoinder, entitled Shamshér i téztar, is in the press.

MSS. of the Burhán are numerous. There exists also a Turkish translation of it.

فرهنگ رشیدی 11.

This is the first critical dictionary. It stands unsurpassed. The name of the author is Mullá 'Abdurrashíd of Tattah (عَلَيْ الله Sind. Other lexicographers, especially the writer of the Bahár i 'Ajam, call him سيد رحمه الله. He completed his dictionary in A. D. 1653, or A H. 1064, as shewn by the táríkh (metre Ramal)

The author is well known as the compiler of the Muntakhab, the most popular Arabic dictionary in India, which in 1635 he had dedicated to Sháhjahán. When the Persian Dictionary appeared, the king was the prisoner of his perfidious son Aurangzib, for whom Rashidi has no words of praise; for at that time Aurangzib had not acquired that odour of sanctity which pious Muhammadans acknowledge by a على خير , مرحبة الله never bestowed upon any of the preceding Moguls.

There exists also a rare Risálah written by 'Abdurrashíd, entitled رسالهٔ معربات. He was certainly one of the best scholars Hindústán has produced. His Persian dictionary, though less known, cannot be too highly valued; it is so full of original research, that no Persian scholar ought to be without a Rashídí. As a compiler 'Abdurrashíd is most careful; he rarely copies doubtful words from other dictionaries without removing the doubt; and when he is unable to do so, he plainly states that he does not know the word, or adds a العلم المنافق العلم المنافق الله اعلم العلم المنافق المناف

The following passage taken from Rashídí's preface defines the object of the dictionary and gives at the same time an idea of its usefulness—

معقرف بعجز وقصور ومغقرف از مشرب اهل هوش و ارباب شعور عبد الرشيد بن عبد الغفور الحسيذي الهدني الققوي چنين مي گويد كه چون

فرهنگ جهانگيري و سروري مطالعه افتاد جامع ترين فرهنگها ديد اما مشتمل بود برامرے چند که احتراز و اجتناب ازان لازم و ^{متح}تم گردید اول آنکه مؤلفان آن دوفرهنگها در حل لغات إطناب کرده اند بایراد عبارت مکرره ييحامل واشعار متكثرة لا طايل * دوم تصحيح لفظ و توضيح اعراب و تنقيح معالي چنانكه بايد نكردهاند. سومآنكه بعض لغات عربي درميان لغات فرس درج کرده اند و تنبیه ننموده اند که فرس نیست و جهارم کنکه بعض لغات بتصحيفات خوانده ولغات متعدره ينداشته چند جا ذكركررهاند مثلة بعض کلمات ببای تازی و فارسي و بتا و نون و بعضے را بکاف تازي و فارسی و بعضے را بشین و سین و بعضے را بزای تازی و فارسی و راء تمهمله خوانده و این در نسخه سروری بیشتر است و در جهانگیری کمتر * سوای این نيز سهو و غلط است كه در بيان لغات معلوم شود ، و عجبتر آنكه در بعض لغات میان کاف ولام و میان واو و را و مانند آن حروف که اشتد ا دران بعدے دارد اشتبال نمود براند مثلا در نسخه سروری در لغت گراز گفته که موضے است و حال آنکه بدینمعنی کزاز بضم کاف نازی و هر دو زای ^{معج}مه است و نیز گفته که بمعلی کوزه ایست که تنگ نیز گویند و حال آنکه بدینمعلی كراز بضم كاف نازى و راى مهملة است چذابكه بهر دو معنى صاحب قاسوس تصویح کرده عربی گفته و عجبتر انکه در فرهنگ جهانگیری بمعذی کوزه کواز آوردة بفتم كاف تازى و ابجاى راء مهمله واو و نيز سرورى گفته كه بمعنى چوبهستی است که ستوران بدان رانند و حال آنکه بدینمعنی گواز است بضم کاف فارسی و واو برین قیاس باید کود و در فرهنگ جهانگیری گفته که زیرفان بكسر زاء سُعجمة وياى معروف وفا بمعنى صالا است وحال آنكه زىرقان بباي موحده وقاف عربیست و در هو دونسخـــه بوق و کوف نمعنی بوم گفته انه و اول تصحیف و کوچ و پوچ بمعذی احول گفته و ثانی تصحیف است و اینچنین تصحیفات بسیار است که مذکور خواهد شد مثلا نوجبه بمعدی سیل بذون و بنا خوانده اند و پاغوش بمعنی غرطه ببای فارسی و نون و لنحجه بمعنی ریم آهن باون و بلی تازی و هسر و مسر بها و میم بمعنی یخ و هیدخ و بیدخ بها و بای تاری بمعنی اسپ جلد و پهانه و مهنانه بدای فارسی و میم بمعنی میمون و امثال آن در ^{نسخه} سرواي بسیار است و در جهانگیري ^{کم} و درین قسم تصحیفات کلمه را در جای آورد شد که بصحت نزدیکتر بود و اکثر ارباب فرهنگ معتبره ایراد نمود ه بودند پس اگر در کلمهٔ اشتباه شود هرجا که احتمال داشته باشد باید دید و حمل بر فرو گذاشت آن نکنند .

"'Abdurrashíd of Tattah, the son of 'Abdulghwiar, of the descendants of Husain, originally of Madanah, who is known for his shortcomings and sins, and who has sipped a hand full from the intellectual fountain of the poets of Persia, states as follows—

Alda Kalander

I have examined the Farhang i Jahángírí and Surúrí, and consider them the best dictionaries existing. But they also contain much that is wrong in matter and principle.

- 1. Both authors have enlarged their dictionaries by quoting as proofs, useless verses, and repeating them on several places.
- 2. They are not sufficiently painstaking in ascertaining the correct form of words, their vowels and meanings.
- 3. They enter occasionally Arabic words, and omit to state that the words are not Persian.
- spelt, or even mistake them for separate words. Thus words occur spelt with a ب bé and a ب pé; with a ت té and a س nún; with a الله káf and a أله shín and a من sín; with a أله ي zé and a أله ي zé and a أله ي ré. Such mistakes are especially frequent in Surúrí, though less in the Farhang.

Besides there are actual blunders, as shall be shewn below. curiously enough, both compilers confound words commencing with a ré, and other letters و káf and a ل lám, with a و wáw and a ré, and other which it is almost impossible to mistake. As an example I may mention the word گواز guráz, which has in Surúrí the following meanings--1, a certain disease. This is a mistake for the Ar. كزاز kuzáz. 2, a kind of vessel, also called تنگ tang. This is a mistake for the Ar. كواز kuráz. The Farhang again enters كواز kawáz, with a wáw instead of a ré. 3, a stick to urge on cattle. This is a mistake for گواز guwaz. Or, the Farhang gives a word ويرفان zérfán [or according to some MSS. zírfán, the moon. This is a mistake for the Arab. ربوفان zibirqán. Again, both the Farhang and Surúrí give پوچ buf and کوچ buf ; but the former is wrong; or بوف squinting, the latter being wrong. Similar mistakes are— نوجبه naujabah and توجبه taujabah, a torrent; ياغوش pághósh and توجبه nághósh, a dive ; مسر nakhjad and معنج bakhjad, dross ; هسر hasar and مسر masar, ice; هيدخ haidakh and بيدخ baidakh, a swift horse; pahnánah and مهنانه mahnánah, a monkey; &c., as shall be seen below. Such mistakes are more numerous in Surúrí than in the Farhang.

I have generally collected the various forms of spelling under that word which, according to the proofs quoted, appeared to be the correct form. Whenever a word appears to be doubtful, it is certainly of no use to pass over it. Let people only look up carefully."

Rashídí's dictionary is accompanied by an excellent Introduction which forms the basis of the Persian Grammar by 'Abdul-Wási' of Hánsah, a book which is read in most Indian schools. The first part of the preface which contains the usual praises to God and Muhammad, is written in ancient Persian, and is one of the finest prefaces known to me. There appears to be no خاته to the dictionary, although Rashídí says in the preface—

و این کداب مشتمل است بر یك مقدمه و چند باب و خاتمه أ

At least the four MSS. which I have seen, do not give it, but end abruptly with the last word ييلاق yéláq. The Khátimah is several times alluded to in the Dictionary; thus under ابا abá soup (or ibá according to Sh., Mu., Ma., FJ.) he says*—

و جمع اقسام اباها در خاتمهٔ کتاب بیاید *

MSS. of this dictionary are rare; the MS. of our Society (No. 76.) is in a bad condition, although with the exception of the preface, it is pretty carefully copied.

* There are some curious blunders connected with this word on the first and fourth pages of Vullers' Dictionary. Vullers has on p. 1.—

Un jus, jusculum. This form with the madd is in no other Dictionary beside F., and may therefore be struck out. 2) potio, potus. Not to be found in any Persian Dictionary, 3) part. admirandi mirum. This is a blunder for U ayá. And on p. 4.—

ابای گلوگیر (patres fauces constringentes) met. gaudium et voluptas; 2) aerumna (غم) mundi; 3) gaudium de inimico mortuo, B.

Thirdly, the meaning aerumna (غم) mundi is the blunder of some inattentive copyist for نعم دنيا ni'am i dunyá, the joys of this world.

Fourthly, the preceding word in Vullers, آبای علوی ábá i 'alawí, is a blunder for ábái 'ulwí.

Both dictionaries are written by Sirájuddín 'Alí Khán, poetically styled الزو Arzú, of Akbarábád. He is the best commentator whom India has produced. His commentaries to Nizámí's Sikandarnámah, the Qaçídahs of Kháqání and 'Urfí, and his شرح to the Gulistán, entitled شرح are of great value. The Siráj is his largest work and has gained him the titles of سراج المحققين and مرشكاف مدققين (متقدمين), and many quotations not given in the preceding dictionaries. The words which belong to the متابع المتعمال متأخرين, or as it is often called, the second part of the Siráj.

The chief importance of the Siráj lies in this, that it is a commentary on the Burhán and Rashídí. Rashídí is occasionally, though not always convincingly, checked, when he doubts the correctness of a quotation, whilst the critical remarks on the Burhán are so numerous, that the Burhán should never have been printed without the notes of the Siráj. There are also a few words which Rashídí, notwithstanding his great carefulness, has overlooked and for the criticism of which the Siráj is the more valuable. I take as an example the word the surhán has—ostan and اوستاك ostam and اوستام ostan.

- 1. The harness of a horse.
- 2. A man whom you can trust.
- 3. The threshold of a house.

Vullers gives the same on p. 142a. of the first volume of his Lexicon. The FJ. gives likewise the three meanings with examples, but he has not the form ارستان óstán. Nor is it in Surúrí and Rashídí; who besides have only the first two meanings. We see therefore a اجای تأمل and the third meaning. The example which the FJ. quotes for the meaning a threshold is taken from Náçir Khusrau (metre Muszári')

We see at once that this verse proves nothing; for the first meaning the harness of a horse suits far better. I am at a loss to see why Rashidi has omitted to make a remark on the third meaning. Sururi, as I said above, passes in silence over meanings which he thinks wrong or unsupported. The Siraj has—

Thus we see that Burhán's form 'ostán is to be struck out as unsupported, and that the meaning a threshold, as given in the FJ., is not proved.

The author of the Siráj says in his preface as follows:—

"As far as the correctness of meanings and the explanation of difficult passages are concerned, no dictionary comes up to the Farhang i Rashídí, whilst the Burhán has certainly the merit of being the completest vocabulary existing. But in both dictionaries there are erroneous statements; especially so in the Burhán, which is full of wrong meanings and spellings, as shall be seen below. To correct them is the only object of this dictionary. Hence I have not repeated the examples which are given in the FJ., Sur. and R.

"Whilst I was writing this dictionary, I obtained a MS. copy of a work written by a Persian savant whose name is Majduddín 'Alí, poetically styled Qúsí. His book, although it is not known, contains many critical gems; and I have thought best to add them to my own remarks. Beside this MS. copy, I have used the FJ., Sur., R., Mu., B., the Farhang i Múnisí, the Kashf, some commentaries on the Gulistán, the Masnawí i Maulawí, &c. My friend Sayyid Muhammad Masíh Khán expressed the táríkh of the compilation of this book by calling it which will be found to give A. H. 1147, [or A. D. 1734-5]. I have followed the order of the words as adopted by B. and R., because it is by far the best system of arrangement."*

يادبود سراج الدين على خاك

^{*} I cannot give the Persian text, as the copy of the Siráj in my hands is too faulty.

MSS. of the Siráj are very rare. I have only seen one, which Major Lees kindly placed into my hands. It belongs to the Fort William College Library, but is a bad copy. The Siráj is rather voluminous, as it contains the words of the Burhán with lengthy remarks attached to each.

The Chirágh i Hidáyat is a much smaller work. It has been several times printed. A very handy edition of the Ghiás, easily obtainable in any part of India, contains the Chirágh in the margin.

Khán Arzú's Díwán is much esteemed; Bh. often quotes his verses. Of his other works which compilers ought to read, I may mention the Tanbíh ul gháfilín, a critical work on the poems of عزين Hazín of Içíahán, who died at Benares during the last century. Hazín, though a great poet and a man of learning, is not always exact in his metaphors, and borrows from other poets more than native critics by way of منعت allow. Khán Arzú in his attack tries to shew that Hazín is سارق and سارق, and سارق, and سارق, and العريفاني are, however, not tenable, and Ték Chand, Mirzá Qaíl and Wárastah take frequently occasion to justify Hazín. One of Khán Arzú's nephews also, Mír Muhsin 'Alí, wrote a critic on the Tanbíh. Again, a very fair rejoinder, entitled قول فيصل Çahbáí. As most remarks refer to Persian style and idiom, compilers and grammarians will do well to procure copies.

Two rhetorical works written by Khán Arzú are entitled-موهبت عظمی در معانی and عطیه کبری در بدیع were lithographed at Allahabad in 1830 and 1841.

The following extract is taken from the Miftáh ut Tawáríkh,* p. 338—

نسب او از جانب پدر بشیخ کمال الدین خواهرزادهٔ شیخ نصیر الدین محمود و از طرف مادر بشیخ محمد غوث گوالیاری شطاری میرسد، از شعوای تازهگو بود و در سلك منصبداران پادشاهی بوده در اوائل سلطنت محمد فرخ سیر بخدمت از خدمات گوالیاری مامور گردیده مدتے در شاهجهان آباد

* Lucknow 1864, 406 pp 4to. The author of this book is defined by the Malam Bell (?)], a clever Persian writer and poet. Some of his tarkhs are excellent. The tarkh on p. 371 does not refer to the Madrasah, but to the former Fort William College at Calcutta.

استقامت داشت * چون وقت او بآخر رسد بلکهنو آمد و درانجا بیست وسیوم شهر ربیع الثانی سنه هزار و یك صد و شصت و نه در گذشت • چندگاه بلکهنو المخاك سپرده شد بعد ازان برادرزادهٔ او محمد حسن خان تابوتش بدهلی برده درانجا دفن ساخت میر غلام علی آزاد تاریخش گفته بیت • بیت • سراج الدین علی خان نادر العصر ز مرگ او سخن را آبرو رفت سراج الدین علی خان نادر العصر ز مرگ او سخن را آبرو رفت اگر جوید کسے سال وفاتسش بگو آن خان معنی آرزو رفت

According to this extract, Khán Arzú died in January 1756.

Sirájuddín's commentaries are very rare. In his Sharh to the Sikandarnámah, we find occasional references to the abovementioned Majd 'Alí.

- 14. The works of Munshi Ték Chand.*
 - بهار عجم 1.
 - جواهر العَروف 2.
 - ابطال ضرورت 3.
 - نوادر المصادر 4.

There exist lithographed editions of these four lexicographical works; the last three are somewhat rare.

1. The Bahár i 'Ajam is one of the grandest dictionaries ever written by one man. There exist seven editions of it revised by the author. The first appeared in A. D. 1752; the Delhi lithographed edition of 1853 is taken from the author's last MS., which he completed in 1782, or thirty years after the first edition. The MS. preserved in the Fort William College Library, Calcutta, appears to be one of the first issues. Though not so complete as the last, it is a good MS. and preferable to the Delhi lithographed edition, which unfortunately is so full of typographical errors, as to be almost useless. Future compilers of Persian dictionaries ought to be very careful in using the Delhi edition, especially if they extract examples.

The chief object of the Bahár i 'Ajam is to explain the Isti'mál i mutaakhkharín. Most examples are therefore taken from the poets after the time of Jámí, although quotations and phrases from the older poets are by no means inconsiderable. The work is so well known that it is unnecessary to say more about it.

آيك چند some call him منشي آيك ; some call him

* Munshi is a title given in Upper India to Hindoos acquainted with Persian and Arabic.

or رای تیک چند. He was by caste a Khetrí. His poetical name is بہار. He lived at Delhi. From a note at the end of the second volume of the Delhi edition, it appears that he was nearly deprived by one of his pupils of his well merited fame as the author of the seventh revised edition. Ték Chand must have died shortly after 1782, because he was prevented by old age from commencing the eighth revised edition.

In the preface the author states that for the first edition he only used the Tanbíhulgháfilín by Siráj ushshu'ará (Sirájuddín, the author of the Sirájullughát), and a small treatise written by Mír Muhammad Afzal, poetically styled Sábit ثابت. For the following editions Ték Chand used the Muçtalahát ushshu'ará, the Risálah i Mukhliçí i Káshí, and another book whose title and author were unknown. The first of these three works Ték Chand embodied almost entirely; hence it is so little known.

2. The Jawáhir ulhurúf and the Ibtál i Szurúrat were written by Ték Chand during the compilation of the Bahár i 'Ajam.

The Jawahir ulhuruf contains two chapters:

- در بیان حروف مفرد 1.
- در بیان حروف صلّه و غیره 2.

The former part is the completest treatise on the interchange of letters. It forms an excellent basis for the etymological part of a Persian grammar, and is an indispensable Vade mecum for the compiler, as it is of the greatest assistance to him in the numerous spellings of certain words. The second chapter treats of the syntax of the Persian prepositions and particles. Numerous examples are given. The lithographed edition which appeared A. H. 1267 at Cawnpore, is taken from a unique MS. in the handwriting of the author. It is on the whole well printed.

3. The Ibtál i Szurúrat is the best, if not the only, work on the Tuçarrufát i Fársí, or the modifications which both Arabic and Persian words have undergone in Persia during the last ten centuries. In plan the book coincides with our popular and interesting works on the study of words, such as by Trench, Richardson, &c. The term فرورت comes nearest to our "a poetical license," and the object of Ték Chand's book is to shew that in good Persian poetry, there is no license, but that every peculiar expression is either based upon sufficient authority, or is wrong. Hence the title "Ibţâl i Szurûrat" or the frustrating of that which a bad Persian poet would call a ضرورت شعر, although in reality it is عجز طبعي or want of poetical genius.

A lithographed edition appeared at Delhi in A. H. 1268, 78 pp., small 8vo. It is rare.

4. The Nawádir ul maçádir is a complete collection of the Maçdars of the Persian language. The quotations are numerous, especially those from the older poets. The book is therefore most valuable for the compiler. The lithographed edition which appeared in A. H. 1272 at Delhi, 120 pp, large 8vo., is taken from a MS. in Ték Chand's handwriting. The book is very fairly got up.

The arrangement of the words in Ték Chand's lexicographical works is the same as in Rashídí and Burhán.

مصطلحات الشعرا ..15

The title of the work contains the táríkh of its commencement by the author, A. H. 1180, or A. D. 1767. Like Ték Chand he is a Hindoo, and was born at Lahore. His poetical name is وارسته Wárastah, independent; his real name, according to other books, is سيال كوتي مل. From his preface it appears as if Wárastah had lived for a long time in Irán, where he thoroughly studied the صحاورات. His dictionary was completed in 1782 after fifteen years, labour, although a MS. copy of at least a part of it came into the hands of the author of the Bahár i 'Ajam, who has largely extracted from it. There are, however, several phrases which Ték Chand has omitted. Though Wárastah's dictionary is much smaller than the Bahár, because the quotations are not so numerous, it has the merit of being entirely an original work.

There exists a very handy copy of the Muctalahát, lithographed in A. H. 1280 at Lucknow, 404 pp., Royal 8vo. It contains in the margin an extract of the Bahár i 'Ajam, whose words are given without the quotations.

غياث اللغات 16.

The name of the compiler is Maulawi Muhammad Ghiasuddin of Rampur, east of Delhi. After fourteen years' labour he finished the work in A. H. 1242, or A. D. 1826. The dictionary contains "all necessary Arabic, Persian and Turkish words," especially those which occur in such Persian authors as are read in schools. The dictionary is therefore a very useful book; it is in fact "The Student's Dictionary." Hence also its general use among the natives of India. Embodied with the dictionary are several small treatises, as on فضائل, on geography (vide في اقليم), and also grammatical notes (vide إلى), a description of Hindústán, &c. The work is accompanied by several astronomical and geometrical designs, and a few maps, which shew that the compiler was not unacquainted with western science. A large number of scientific terms are also explained.

No Persian dictionary ought to be in future compiled without the words of the practical Ghiás; but compilers will do well to remember that Ghiasuddín is not a native of Persia. Of all Indian dictionaries it contains the largest amount of those peculiarities which belong to the Istimál i Hind. Hence for the pronunciation of words the Ghiás is not always the best authority. Even among the meanings of the words, Ghiás enters occasionally an Indian meaning, taking it for Persian. In some cases, from a comparison of several dictionaries, his attention is forcibly drawn to the Indian usage of words, as will appear from the following extract:—

شمیدن بوئیدن و این از جملهٔ لغات عربیه است که فارسیان دران تصرف نموده اند از عالم طلبیدن و فهمیدن زیراچه ماخوذ است از شسم بعمنی بوئیدن * لیکن بعد نوشتن بتحقیق پیوست که شمیدن بمعنی بو کردن نیامده بلکه باین معنی هم شنیدن بنون است و بمیم تحریف است. از سراج • مگر شمیدن در اصل فارسی بمعنی رمیدن و بیهوش شدن و پریشان شدن و ترسیدن آمده چانکه در مؤید و جهانگیری ا

There exist two lithographed editions of the Ghiás, one together with the Chirágh i Hidáyat, and another printed in 1847, by one Mír Hasan, from a MS. corrected by the compiler.

لطائف اللغات . 27

The name of the compiler is Abdullațif ibn i 'Abdullah Kabir. His object was to write a special dictionary for the Masnawi of Maulavi Rúm. Hence he says—

واین فرهنگ است مشتمل بر لغات غریبهٔ عربیه و الفاظ عجیبهٔ فارسیهٔ مثنوی مولوی معنوی *

He has also written a commentary to the Masnáwí, entitled Latáif ul Ma'nawí, of which our Society possesses a very good MS. (No. 846, 220 leaves, small 8vo.), bearing the muhr of 'Abdulwahháb Khán Bahádur Nugratjang.

The compiler lived during the reign of Sháhjahán; but the FJ. is the latest dictionary consulted by him.

The Catalogue of our Persian MSS. calls him Gujrátí.

IV.

I subjoin a few notes on the Isti'mál i Hind. Those who wish to study this important subject, ought to make themselves acquainted with the writings of Mírzá Qatíl, entitled چهار شربت, شجرة الاماني and a treatise by Anwar 'Alí on the spelling of Persian words, entitled Risálah i Imlá i Fársí. These works have been lithographed and are easily obtainable.

The change in spelling, form, meaning and construction, which an Arabic word, apparently without any reason, undergoes in Persian, or which an Arabic or a Persian word undergoes in Hindustani, is called قصوف taçarruf. The taçarrufat of Persian words are included in the استعمال فرس isti'mál i furs, the usage peculiar to the Persians, and the taçarrufat of the Hindustani language, and of the Persian written in India, in the استعمال هند isti'mál i hind. A knowledge of the latter is of great importance, not only for those who read Persian books written or printed in India, but also for every Hindustani scholar; for although the Isti'mál i Hind is looked upon with suspicion by learned natives, we have to bear in mind that its peculiarities are generally adopted and therefore correct. So at least for the Hindustani, according to the proverb

In its relation to Persian the Isti'mál i Hind will of course in most cases appear as something faulty; for the peculiarities may no longer be a natural form of development, or a غلط عام, but the result of ignorance, a غلط عوام كالانعام. Nevertheless the Isti'mál i Hind is visible in every Persian book written by Indians, from the works of their excellent historians down to a common dinner invitation (فيافتنامه) of the daily life. Even the works of a writer like Abulfaszl, "the great Munshí," shew traces of it. Hence the truth of Mons. Garcin de Tassy's remark that every Persian scholar ought to be acquainted with Hindustani. If this be true for the Persian scholar, it is much more true for the compiler of a Persian dictionary; for a good dictionary ought to be based upon a thorough knowledge of the language in all its forms of development, and must be a history of the language as well as a vocabulary.

But if we only understand by Isti'mál i Hind the influence of the Hindí and Hindustani upon the Persian, we would almost identify the term with "the usage of the Persian writers since the establishment of the Mogul dynasty." This would be wrong; for the Isti'mál i Hind includes peculiarities which once belonged to the Persian, as spoken in Persia, but which the modern Irání, in the course of its progress, has entirely discarded. In early times Persian had become the court language of Túrán, and from Túrán it was carried to India by the waves of the Túránian immigrants and invaders. Hence on the whole the Persian of India is Túránian. As Latin in the Middle Ages, so was the Persian in Túrán, and subsequently in India, the language of the learned. The works of the pre-classical and classical periods were studied and imitated, and peculiarities have thus been preserved which have long since disappeared in the Iraní Persian. The difference between the pre-classical and the modern Persian is, of course, not so great, as between Latin and any of the Romanic languages, because the pre-classical Persian had already attained that logical simplicity to which our modern European languages happily tend; and though representing the growth of the Persian language during nine centuries, it is scarcely greater than the difference between the English of Fletcher and Beaumont and the English of our century. The Persian language has been compared to a bare tree, stripped of all its leaves. This stripping process, however, is going on in every spoken language, and shews that the copious and beautiful forms of languages like Sanserit, Gothic, Greek, and many modern savage languages, are as many illogical incumbrances. The sequences of events and the order of things which the imitative genius of the modern languages expresses by the order of the words, are expressed in the ancient languages by the annexation of words and particles rather than by a logical order of the words, as if the speaker was afraid that the hearer could only understand those ideas for which there was an audible equivalent. Whilst many are apt to look upon stripping off the leaves as a matter of regret, I would consider it as a step towards delivering the human mind from the fetters of form. Perhaps I tread upon contestable ground. But a fact remains; it is this, that of all nations whose languages are preserved to us, the Persians are the first Arians that pitched the tent of speech on the elevated tableland of logical thought.

Simplified then as the Persian language is, further change in terminations being impossible, the growth, as in modern English, is only visible in the pronunciation, the spelling and the meanings of words. For the study of this development a comparison of the works of the older writers with those of the modern, is essential; and as the Persian written and studied in India has hitherto been imitating the pre-classical and classical Persian of the early invaders, the importance of the Isti'mál i Hind is easily recognised.

The following peculiarities are said by native writers to be common to the Persian of Túrán and India.

- a. Many words end in the Túránian Persian in ک (káf), whilst the Iránian has a گ (gáf); as کبک a kind of partridge, in Túr. کبک; که مشک mishg musk, in Túr. مشک mushk; اشک a tear, in Túr. اشک a doctor, مشک a drop, in Túr. سرشک . Similarly, بنشک a doctor, رشگ, &c., in Túr. with a final káf.
- b. Also in the beginning of certain words; as گشادی, in Túr. کشادی (as every Muhammadan in India pronounces); کشادی coriander seed, in Túr. کشنیز.

This difference between the Túránian على and the Iránian ك becomes very apparent in Dictionaries arranged according to the first and last letters. Thus in Surárí شك stands in the بفصل إلف مع كاف فارسي, whilst in the Madár in the فصل الف مع كاف قازي.

- c. The Túránian has preserved a clear distinction between the واو and با when با (ó, é) and معروف (ú, í). The modern Iránian has only معروف forms (í, ú). The words which have a majhúl letter must be learned from the Dictionaries; Indian Persian grammars specify the cases, when the ending ن is pronounced معروف.
- d. The Túránian has in all cases preserved the نون غنه. The Iránian has given it up in some, especially after an alif. Thus forms like هرانچه ,ان گاه ,راندم ,ماندم, هرانچه ,شرانچه ,شرانچه ,اندم ,ماندم , شرانچه ,شرانچه , شرانچه , شرانچه
- e. The Túránian never adopted the interchange of $d\acute{a}l$ (3) and $dz\acute{a}l$ (3).
- f. Certain words are peculiar to the Túránians. Examples—es husband, شو ; طرف side for سو ; پسر son for پور ; او son for یزنه ; بلی for اری ; شام evening for بیگاه ; صبی dawn for پیگاه ; شوهر brother-in-law for ينگاه ; شوهرخواهر or ينگاه sister-in-law for برادر زن خسر ; مادر زك mother-in-law for خوش دامن ; برادر brother for دادر and کافقن and یالیدن ; برادر زن for خسر پوره ; پدر زن and کافقن search for تير را برتافتي ; جستن to throw the arrow for cf. دینهروز ; برخاستن to rise for خاستن ; نشستن to sit for شستن ; تیررا to swell (water) for سوارشدن آب ; ديروز to swell (water) فوت شدن ز گذشتن روز to pass away (day) for سوار شدن روز ; زیاده شدن آب to die; پائیدن for خسپیدن; قرار نمودن to sleep for رفقن; خوابیدن, the same as پائیدن شدن , e. g., قربانت روم I am thy sacrifice; پائیدن شدن ز المدن بهادك 1. the same as ماندن و كائيدن to put; 2. the same as گذاشتن to leave behind, e. g., ماندو آام ماندو Ihave left the thing on the shelf, where which is a Turanian form for وربگذارید) leave this house (بگذارید); 3. the same as to leave be- فهادف ; گائيدف to divorce ; 4. the same as طلاق دادب hind; &c.

Although several of those words do occur in Iránian authors, yet we generally find them used in peculiar places, as in rhyme, where it was difficult to avoid them; or in order to prevent repetitions, &c.

The following peculiarities appear to be limited to the Persian spoken and written in India.

a. Words have peculiar meanings. Examples—آسوده , the same as آسوده asatisfied ; عثيل ; غيبت absence for سثل ; غيبت absence for سير

- b. The word & is pronounced ké, not kž. This seems to be the old form ∠, still preserved in كاشكر. The Iszáfat is pronounced ĕ, not ž, and é in cases of words ending in &; e. g., الله khanah é man. The word خانةُ من نه pad in Hind. فالله bádsháh, as بادشاه pad in Hind. الكرّ (a prick to urge on an elephant), in order to avoid the Hind. الكرية which sounds, as Rashídí observes, like الكرية Other Indian pronunciations are بالله palk and palak for pilk an eyelid; فغال fighán the same as مناو بالله for fughán; قيرة for pilk an eyelid; نالله same as مناو به عنو a revelation, فيرة و عنو exertion, have lost the jazm and are pronounced 'afó, hajó with the accent on the ultima.
- c. Peculiar forms are پیدایش ,پیدایش (the first and last occur in Abulfaszl), for باری رزیبائی ,پیدائی , the ending ish being properly restricted to nouns derived from verbs; قرشی for ترشائی acidity; آدمیت humanity; مسئیس ,سائس humanity; مسئیس ,سائس a groom, for اجنه a plural اجنه a groom, for مسئیس , vide Vull.; مرستگی , vide Vull.; مانیس , vide Vull.

d. In words beginning with 1, the Madd is often omitted; as القرار بالتمغا lining,* استون sleeve, ابفت canvass, استون ready, المتمغا royal order, ابفت المستور القرار التمغا المادة المفت المستور الهار التمغا المادة المفت المستور الهار المادة المفت المستور الهار المفت المستور الهار المستور الهار المستور الهار المستور الهار المستور ال

e. After a long vowel we often find a vowel clided; as آفرین فإثرانه for the Iranian áfarín, مولوی maulwí for maulawí, إصادگي maulwí for maulawí, مادگي póshidyí for póshidagí, خالصه khalçah for kháliçah, خالصه dzhdan‡ for ázhadan.

f. Two Sákins are avoided; as ارجمند arjamand for arjmand.

h. The Tashdid of many Arabic words falls away, as יפוֹי nawáb for nawwáb an (Indian) Nawáb; אָנוֹש , pl. גֿוָם, an atom.

i. The following pronunciations are very common, though generally prohibited in the Dictionaries—خزات khizán autumn, for خزات khazán; دراز diráz§ for the Persian daráz long; شنبه shambah, and even shumbah|| Saturday, for شنبه shambih; پولام, and even پلاو, puláw, and even پلاو, puláw. The modern ^{*} Entered by Vullers as Persian. It is Indian.

[†] So in many Persian Dictionaries written by Indians.

[†] There is a curious mistake in Vull. Dict. I, p. 378. Burhán, whom Vullers copies, has بنظر آمده بنظر آمده الله ; but Vullers does not observe that ذرات هم بنظر آمده الله Indian printer of the Burhán left out the Tashdíd) are synonymous, reads ذرات , for the A. ذرات , and translates canities in anteriore capitis!

[§] Vull. also has diráz, although Burhán gives clearly بروزن نهاز namáz.

^{||} Vull. also has پنجشنبه panjshambah I, 375. b., and هنده sihshambah II, p. 354, whilst in other places he has correctly shambih.

Persian and Turkish have پالو piláw. مرویش durwesh,* for darwish a beggar; نمکین nimak salt, for namak; نمکین nimkín, adj., for namakín; نمکین gawáh a witness, for گواه guwáh; گواه girah a knot, for girih; کاغذ mazdúr wages, for مزدور kághidz paper, for کاغذ kághadz.

k. A great number of Arabic words are universally wrong pronounced in India; as قيامت qil'ah a fort, for qal'ah; قيامت qaiamat the resurrection, for qiyamat; قطعة qat'ah, for qit'ah; عروس 'urús a bride, for arús; عجز 'ijz weak-ness, for 'ajz; عجز rija hope, for rajá; فضا fiza space, for fazá; نصمة raza contentment, for riza; إفاه a pocket, for jaib; agmat chastor ghiás help; عيات shaháb for shiháb, a meteor; عصمت 'açmat chastity, for içmat; موقع haháb for shiháb, a meteor; عصمت 'açmat chastity, for içmat; موقع khímah atent, for khaimah; شجاعت himáqat for hamáqat, folly, عقوبت 'aqúbat for 'uqúbat, punishment; عقوبت 'aqúbat for 'uqúbat, punishment; عقوبت 'hashmat pomp, for hishmat; عنات jinnat paradise, for jannat.

الد Peculiar spellings; as ازدهام for ابیکار و ازدهام for تعوین و پیگار و ازدهام for ازدهام for تعوین و پیگار و ازدهام Proper nouns are often written together, as تعوین و استاء الله تعالی و استاء و استاء و استاء الله تعالی و استاء و است

. نماز کردن for ,نماز پرتهنا .

v.

The following terms, abbreviations, &c., are of frequent occurrence in native Persian Dictionaries:—

1. اسدالحكما Asadulhukamá, the poet Asadí of Ṭús, Firdausí's teacher.

^{*} Adopted by some Indian Dicts., as the Ghias, on a mistaken etymology.

[†] Thus also in Persian MSS.

شيواي طوسي Shéwá i Ţusi, Firdausi.

نصيح گنجوي Façîh-i-Ganjawí, Nizámí of Ganjah.

خالق المعاني Khallúq ul Ma'ání, the "shaper" of meanings, Kamál of Içfahán.

. Sa'dí قدوة المتغزلين or شيرازي , Sa'dí

الساك الغيب or كمال المتغزلين, or خواجم شيرازي, Háfiz.

كلام متقدمين kalám i asátidzah (plural of ustádz), or كلام اساتذَّة or كلام شعراى بزرگ, the pre-classical and classical poets.

In quoting a poet, the word راست rást is often used, as حافظ راست Háfiz says.

2. The Mogul emperors of Delhí are rarely mentioned by their names, but by their laqabs.

فردوس مكاني firdaus makání, Zahíruddín Bábar, 1526 to 1530. بخنت إستاني jannat ástání, Nagíruddín Humáyún, 1530 to 1556. Jannat áshyání is also used.

عرش آشیانی 'arsh áshyání, Jaláluddín Muhammad Akbar, 1556 to 1605.

جنت مكاني jannat makání, Núruddín Muhammad Jahángír, 1605 to 1627.

jahán. He is also called فردوس آشياني cáhib qirán i sání, the second lord of conjunction, Taimúr, his ancestor, being the first. 1627 to 1658.

 are followed by a proper noun, they do not take the قبله گاهي مع إضافت, as قبله گاهي معدد غوث qiblahgáhí Muhammad Ghaus; but you may say قبله و giblahgáhí i man. Similarly the word بندگي bandagí does not take the Iszáfat, when followed by the name of a Walí or a Shaikh, whilst other titles, as مالزمان خدمت, حضرت , &c., take the Iszáfat.

3. وفرهنگ ; 2. the words of a dictionary are its لغات ; hence you may say كشف اللغات or كشف اللغات ; hence you may say كشف اللغات or كشف اللغت تازى ; 3. language, as كشف اللغت نازى ; although in this sense the word زباك is preferred; 4. a particular form of a word. You say ustá is another form for avestá.

از عالم رودبار is زنگبار, belongs to the same class as rúdbár, i. e., to the nouns ending in بار bâr.

این سند خواهد, this requires a proof.

این معنی باین بیت متمسك شده, this meaning is supported by the following verse.

در رشیدی گوید , در فرهنگ گوید , the author of the Farhang says, Rashidi says.

samá', and قسامع tasúmu', verbal information regarding the correctness of a word, obtained from the هل زباك ahl-i-zabán, the Natives of Persia, or from an التا الملائية المنائية. The same meaning has the phrase از اهل زبان بتحقيق پيوسته.

lahjah provincial pronunciation. You say

دكان بزيادت واو موافق لهجمهٔ هذه است

dúkán is the Indían pronunciation of dŭkán.

تعارف 'urf or تعارف ta'aruf, usage.

taçhíf, an error in spelling.

tahrif, an error in the meaning of a word.

fa-ayham, reflect, be careful. pay attention. Lexicographists often use this phrase after explaining a difficult verse.

تقبع tatabbu' or تعص tafahhuç lexicographical criticism.

4. The following grammatical terms are noticeable—
واو مجهول بای مجهول بای ای the same as واو فارسی وای فارسی, the same as واو فارسی, "pronounce نارجهند بجیم زده ; e. g., موقوف primand with a jazm above the ج, and not arjamand."

The word jazm is never used in Persian Dictionaries, sukún being the usual word.

Every alif in the beginning of a word is called همزة; hence in spelling استاد, you say بضم همزة, baszamm-i-hamzah, not baszamm i alif. And in spelling بفتم همزة و الف و فاى زدة.

The sign —— is called شكل هبورة shakl-i-hamzah. This explains the phraseology of Bh. under جهرة chihrăí pink, where he says:—

بهبرة و تحاني رسيدة در تلفظ نه در رسم خط اا "The word چهره, when pronounced, has an alif and a yá-i-tahtání, چهرهای, but you must not write them." The sign of the hamzah above the s cannot be left out, as Vullers has done, p. 605a. Similar words are فاختهٔ پستهٔ of the same colour as the fákhtah-pigeon, بنقرهٔ نقرهٔ بنته are Indian, and not considered good. This corrects several mistakes in Vullers' Lexicon. Regarding the shakl i hamzah in words as تكافئ ملجئ بنادئ وملجئ به شاخری و بالمنافئ و بالمنا

In Lucknow and Delhi prints we often find a shakl-i-hamzah above the silent 8, as خوابيده و بيدار for خوابيده و بيدار. This pedantry is also recommended by the grammarian 'Abdulwási' of Hánsah. Another absurdity of modern MSS. and prints is the spelling بلكه for بلكه though Ghiás approves of the former.

The letters of the alphabet may be treated as masculines or feminines; you may say غير منقوطه, or شين منقوط . For غير منقوطه ghair manqútah, you may say بنقطه , or فيل bénuqat.

The word کنایه kináyah is followed by the prep. از, in imitation of the Arab. عند. You say :—

نی کذایهٔ از دل پردرد و سوز شاعران

"The sorrowful heart of a poet is compared to the plaintive nai."

VI.

Among the Dictionaries printed in Europe, I shall only mention Johnson's Dictionary and Vullers' Lexicon Persico-Latinum Etymologicum.

It is difficult to make a comparison between the two, as the objects of the compilers are different. In point of usefulness, Johnson's work is the better of the two; * it is eminently "the translator's dictionary." It does not pretend to be a critical dictionary, which Vullers does. Johnson gives Arabic words, in which he is exceedingly exact, as he had good sources; Vullers has only a few. The Persian words of both Dictionaries contain a great number of words and meanings that never existed, and many wrong spellings, because both used the B. and the Haft qulzum—works which compilers ought not to use. But the number of mistakes is greater in Vullers, because he has used other bad sources, as shall be shewn hereafter. On the other side Johnson has given many meanings derived from the study of Persian writers, in which point Vullers is sadly deficient. Again, for the Isti'mál-i-Mutaakhkharín, Vullers is better, as he has used, from the middle of the letter ε , the Bahár i 'Ajam.

^{*} Vullers does not think much of Johnson. He classes him with Castelli, Meninski, and Richardson, and says:—"Horum enim operum accurata compa-

For those who use Vullers' Lexicon, the following remarks may be of use:—

The words marked in Vullers

C. (Castelli).

C. ex pers. vers. V. Test. (words taken by Castelli from some version of the Old Testament).

C. ex G. I do not know what this means.

F. (Farhang-i-Slur'úrí).*

M. ex F. (words which Meninski took from the Farhang-i-Shu'úrí).

and B. in app. (the appendix by Captain Roebuck) are nearly all doubtful.

As examples of words marked C., C. ex pers. vers. V. Test., and C. ex G., I shall mention—الفند, a blunder for الفند, الفند, الويك والله المال المال ratione cum primariis fontibus ipsis [B. and HK.?] facta edoctus sum, permultas in iis significationes esse allatas, quae in falsa et perversa interpretatione exempli primarii nituntur indeque utpote falsas prorsus esse delendas." De te fabula narratur.

* I mean those words marked with the letter F., which Vullers did not find in B., Bh., HK., SHL.

The MS. of the Farhang-i-Shu'úrí which Vullers used, must have been the worst possible in existence. But I do not think that the Dictionary itself is trustworthy. As I have seen no copy of this Turkish Dictionary, . I am merely guided by quotations in Vullers which mention the sources from which F. extracted. As F. used the Sharafnamah, Farhang-i-Jahángírí, Surúrí, the Majma'-i-Khání, his Dictionary ought to be a model. But F. has not made a proper use of his sources, and gives hundreds of words from them, which are nowhere to be found in the numerous and most excellent MSS. of FJ., Sur., Sh., &c., in my possession. Thus the references of F. in Vullers to the Farhang i Jahángírí under پرهنچ, پندان ,پاشيب, are wrong; my MSS. of the FJ. contain neither the last three words, nor the absurd meaning of the So likewise F.'s references to Surúrí's Majma'ulfurs under Surúrí contains ; پيراسته بيرگال ,بذوند ,بسته ,بستو *,بروفه ,برندك nothing of the absurdities ascribed to him. F.'s references to the : and to the Majma'-i lughát; ييراد يروال پخشيدن sharafnámah under i-Khání under چماق بالأجور, انبوسيدن, are entirely fictitious Nor did Burhán find the above words in his MSS. of the FJ. and Sur.

These are examples taken only from words beginning with ψ be and ψ pe.

At least one-half of the verses copied by Vullers from F. have neither sense, nor metre; and it is a matter of surprise, how Vullers could have entered them at all. Examples:—

اندخواره المحقاد البيبى locus munitus. F.; e. g., in hoc versu الدخواره المحتاد البيبى كهن گرگ ژكاره ندارم جز درت هيچ اندخراره المحتاد المحتاد الله المحتاد الله المحتاد الله المحتاد الله المحتاد ال

بامس. Read in Daqíqi's verse خدایگانا O God!, for جندایگانئه; and for the absurd verse of Shams-i-Fakhri read (metre hazaj)

همهجون خر لنگست حسودت بوحل در افتاده و پر بار بمانده شده بامس "Thy enemy has fallen into a mire like a lame ass, laden and left without help."

* For دستار رومیان بند, as given by Vullers, Sur. has correctly دستار و میانبند.

† Similarly Vullers on p. vii of his preface, in the fifth note ביג hibbuhu for ביג hasbuhu!

ببر. Vullers' verse from the Sháhnámah is given in Rashídí as follows:—

یکے خام دارد ز چوم پلنگ بپوشد همی اندر آید اجنگ چومن ببر پوشم بروز نبرد سر چرخ مالا اندر آرم بگود burinish. Vullers quotes from F. the following verse of Nizami—برینش در اید و تند که برنیش ناید زشمشیر کند and says:—"in quo tamen falso et contra metrum legitur برنيش [būrinísh], quod e conjectura in ترينش [būrinísh] mutavi." But by this conjecture, Vullers makes the second foot صفعول maf'ulun ———, instead of فعول fa'ulun ———! My MSS. read correctly

دلے باید اندیشه را تیز و تند پرینش نیاید زشمشیر کند

بشار. In the verse of Amír Khusrau read در وحل instead of Vullers', دروحل, and translate:— "How may a weak man get rid of his frame of clay; an elephant even is helpless when he sticks in the clay." The fourth meaning in Vullers is quite useless, as پای بند is an adjective, and the same as the گرفتار of the fifth meaning.

پتيارة 3) perturbatio. For Vullers' verse from the Sháhnámah read:—

مر آن اژدها را بصد پاره کرد بسے شور و پرخاش و پتیاره کرد Again, Vullers' words 2) in hoc versu ejusdem poetae are wrong, as the verse quoted belongs to بید ذوالفقار, but not to بید ذوالفقار, F. having changed the order of the meanings given in the FJ. The fifth meaning is very likely wrong, as the MSS. read the second migrá' (metre muszári')

پيغارؤ تحــوك باد بزان دهد

5. Vullers p. 408, a. For the verse of Shaikh Auhadí read (metre khafíf)

بنویسده برات برجائے کز دوخروار اداکند تائے . کر سه خروار اداکند تائے . کر سه خروار MSS. of the Jam i Jam read . کر سه خروار He (the king) writes out at once a money order, when he (the paymaster) pays him (the poet) out of the two loads of money ordered by the king, only half a load."

The verse quoted for the fifth meaning, is given in good MSS. of Háfiz as follows (metre Mutaqarib)—

مغنّي كجائى نوائه بزن بيكتائي او كه تائه بزن

"Where art thou, singer, strike up a tune! By His unity, strike up a tune!" Vide also Vullers' Lex. I. p. 920 a., under Us. But this verse belongs to Vullers' sixth meaning. Again, in the fifth meaning, my MSS. give the second migrá' of Kátibí's Rubá'í as follows:—

آرنگ. For the verses read-but there are a few verses intervening between the two. The two causatives لنگانيدن and لنگانيدن may safely be entered in our Dictionaries.

تز. For the first miçrá' of Hakím Sózaní's verse read (metre hazaj):—

نخراهم مغز گوز از بهر آنوا

"I do not want to eat the góznut, because, &c., where ازبهر آنوا is old for ازبهر آن Old Persian poets often use ای after the prepositions بهر از از بهر از

The words extracted by Vullers from F.-I mean again those which are not at the same time marked with B.—are very extraordinary. Examples: - بالم ; اسكدار and البكرار ; البليسة ablunder of البليقة ; آبام ; اسكدار آزفت ; آزفده ; آزود ; آزده ; آرزودن ; آرداد ; آدك ; آخيز ; آجاز ; ابرة for for آغوه ; آسيب for آشيب واژگونه for آشگونه ; آبزرفت for مُعونه ; آموغ it is Arabic ; الوشيدن ; الر for السر ; but it is Arabic ; خاندان amurgh ; آواره a blunder for آواك (ábuk) غلام أنك (abuk) ئى the ré and hé having been drawn together; هنجلوغ the non plus ultra of a Persian Infinitive ; آييان ; آينت and آيفت ; آهنو ; Infinitive as الأئيدن and hundreds more, for مدزيدن, آموزيدن, هدر بالودك, هموزيدن بالموزيدن الموزيدن الموزيدن الموزيدن الموزيدن Infinitives, though perhaps correctly formed, have been invented by grammarians in usu tironum, but they ought not to be given in a Dictionary; just as تاء tá vacca quæ semper mulgetur (Vull. p. 408), sá vivum facit omne (Vull. p. 495), &c., were invented in usu a b c dariorum on the C for cow, D for dog principle!

As the above examples are at random taken from the first sixty-five pages, Persian scholars may estimate the number of useless words and blunders in Vullers' Lexicon.

under بسنگ, p. 243, may be learned; but a date-palm is not a plantain-tree. بطریق, p. 249, does not come from patricius, but from patriarch. Under بادره bádrah hastiness, p. 162, Vullers compares بقله بتقله with viah, mistaking بادره for a Persian word; but the word is Arabic, and should be pronounced bádirah. بخشی bakshí, p. 197, is quoted as belonging to a lingua exotica, but it is Persian, and the same as tis in every Arabic Dictionary; just as ترزك بالمالية. Under ترزك بالمالية ب

Another defect of Vullers' Lexicon is this, that in case of words having several forms, the meanings are often given under the unusual or doubtful form. Thus, in the case of أغيل and أغيل, where Vullers has put the meaning to أغيل, instead of to أغيل, for which alone the Dictionaries give examples. Examples of such displaced meanings are frequent.

* It should be Ar. بسام bassám, smiling; Khusrau (metre mujtass)— جهان که نزد خردماد رفترضحک است به نیم خاده نیرزد ازان لب بسام "The world which in the eyes of wise men is a book of laughter, is not worth half a smile from the ever-laughing lip of the sweetheart"—where the FJ. reads بستام bistám, inventing at the same time the meaning a coral. Besides it would not be Persian to say lab-i-bistám, a coral lip; it should at least be العام العام بستام بالم العام العا

In the verses and explanations quoted by Vullers from Bh. we find the same want of understanding, as in the verses quoted by him from F. Examples:—

بهار از bahár ráz read بها راز bahár az.

جعبة, p. 517. Vullers has no idea of what Bh. means. He reads در قروع الله dar tarí i án, and translates fructibus recentibus; but Bh. has در قروى الله dar túe án, in the inside of which. Again by سرپوش sarpósh, Bh. means a lid, so that طبق will be the cup or plate, and جعبة the lid of it. Hence the nice verse of Tásír, which in Vullers has neither sense nor metre (Ramal)— جفته, pp. 519 and 520, c) paedicare. For عردت read کردت read کردت read کردت bish azin, for پیش ازین pish azin.

زنگين به p. 533. Read زنگين for زنگين ; else the verse has no metre جنگلي p. 534. Read عونت ru'unat silliness, for Vullers' زعونت za'aunat. This verse is quoted by Bh. as a proof for the word إجالكي يكپا jangalí i yakpá, an animal of a man's shape, having only one leg; it is proverbial for its stupidity. Hence Vullers has left out the word, but given the verse.

جو p. 535, 3) coll. جوى fluvius, et dicitur de aqua quam in calamo narcissi servare solent, ut narcissus diutius in statu recenti remanere possit. This is a sad blunder. Bh. has جو نرگس jaw-inargis, a grain for the narcissus, not جوي a river. The metre of Mukhliç i Káshí's verse (hazaj) shews that we have to read jau, and not jú. The grain is put into the cup of the flower to keep it from shrinking.

The reference in the fifth meaning to the Sharafnámah is also wrong.

Thus throughout his whole Dictionary.

The mistakes in Vullers arising from his being unacquainted with Hindustani, deserve a short notice. Examples:—

إكبري, p. 116, i. q., آشرفي. First, the madd of إكبري is wrong; secondly, اكبرى is a gold or silver coin of the emperor Akbar.

انگریز, p. 134, English, an Englishman. The Persians and Arabs say انگلیس inglis, the Hindustanis انگلیس angréz. We may compare the modern گرجا girjá, a church, with the Portuguese igreja, and the Greek ekklesia.

p. 140, nom. urbis cujusdam B. It is Oudh, the famous স্থায়া.

بابر, p. 155, a kind of wandering Muhammadan monk, R. Vullers might have left out this error of Richardson's. Similar mistakes are غزبه أربستان, p. 29, for غزبه 'azab and عزبه 'azabistán; 'azabistán; عزبه bakhtigárí, p. 194, for غزبه pukhtahkárí; pukhtahkárí بخشي جز pukhtahkárí; p. 197, for بخشي المغلب bakhshí-i-juz, a deputy paymaster who serves under the بخشي المهابية bakhshí-i-kul, or paymaster-general; بدسم به 204, for بدسم badsanj, as you say بدسني khushsanj, graceful; بدسني badzrgari, p. 207, for برنگري barzaparí, or برنگري barzahgarí; برستا bastanj, an Indian spelling for برنگري bashgír, p. 246, for يالنگ بوش ها يالنگ بوش يالنگ peshgír; يالنگ بوش and يالنگ بوش و يالنگ بوش و

بنگاله, p. 269, nom. magnae urbis et olim metropolis in Hindústán. This absurdity is supplied by F.

e.j., p. 287; the extract from Richardson, with the exception of the meaning, a violin, is correct. The word is Hindee, but occurs very often in Indian Historians. It is a purse of money kept at court for paying alms, rewards, &c.

púlaj. پولې búlach, p. 279; this should be بولې

پولة p. 384. This is the Hind. پولا pólá, a word often applied to fruits.

پيهو, p. 406. This is the Hind. term for pulex communis.

تنبول, p. 465. 3) nom. arcis in Hindustan, B., nomine تنبول zantambúr celebris, F. This absurdity is, of course, supplied by F. It should be رنتنبهور rantanbhúr, as correctly given by FJ., or Rintambore.

tob, p. 475; Vull. does not understand the Hind. تهاك thán, a piece of cloth of a fixed number of yards, Germ. eine Webe.

p. 521, the same as भक्तड, a squall.

جهان باباد, p. 543. Vullers in his extract from Bh. writes twice فالمجهان sháyjahán, for شاهجهان Sháhjahán, the famous emperor of India. I am afraid Vullers has not understood Bh.'s phrase

اما مردم ایران بنابر تعصب جهان آباد میگویدد ۱۱

"It is from obstinacy that the Persians call this town Jahánábád, and not Sháh-jahánábád." The emperor Sháhjahán was often ridiculed by the Persians for assuming the title Sháh of the world. Even the then Sultan of Constantinople (خوندکار روم) made once in a letter a satirical remark on the emperor's magniloquence, when his clever court poet Kalím got him out of the difficulty by composing an ode, in which the following verse occurs (metre muszári')— هنه و جهان زروي عدد هردوچون يكيست شدرا خطاب شاهجهاني مبرهن است "The words فند (5+50+4=59) and جهان (3+5+1+50=59) are in point of value the same; hence the emperor has a clear right to the title Sháhjahán." For this clever verse Kalím received from the بهله his weight in gold, and his ode was sent to Constantinople.

chappar, p. 560; this word is the Hind. چير chappar.

جِيتَل chétal. p. 607, This is a mistake often to be met with in Persian books printed in Europe. The correct form is جِيتَل, with a ξ jim. The word is spelt by Abulfaszl in the A.A., p. 27, l. 4. Nor is it a numus cuprinus, but an imaginary division of a dám, one silver Rupee (of Akbar) being equivalent to forty copper dáms. "Accountants have divided the dám into 25 jetáls." A.A., l. c.

رواني, p. 918, a coin, the 8th of a gold muhur. Thus Vullers from Johnson. It is the eighth part of a rupee, not of a gold muhur. مودالود, dúd álúd, p. 923, 3) n. s. nom. magni oppidi in Hindustan F. sine exemplo. This absurdity is likewise supplied by the praeclarum opus of F. Whoever heard of a town Dúdálúd in India? It a blunder

كتل, II. p. 797; a reference to كودل was required. So likewise, p. 920, under كورلنا وي , and under تهورًا, p. 479 b., l. 24., to توره , p. 479 b., l. 24., to Vullers is also most unfortunate with his إضافات. As the Iszáfat of the Persians is very badly treated in the existing Persian grammars, I trust I shall be excused for inserting here a few notes on the fakk i Iszáfat (فكّ إضافت), or the omission of the Iszáfat, reserving some of Vullers' mistakes for foot notes.

The Iszáfat is omitted for دولت آباد Daulatábád.

a. After پسر صنم ولی نائب دهمن بعاشق میر صاحب (not in prose), هاه ; as—عبر توشك an admiral, میر توشک an admiral, میر العمر بعد بعد بعد المحال المحال بروقت بسروشته بسرزمین (ول برمیان بیس بسروشته بسرزمین (اول برمیان بیس بسرواه بسرمنزل بسروشه بسرواه بسرمنزل بسرچشمه بسرواه بسرمنزل the space behind a wall, پس فودا ولا the day of judgment, پس فودا ولا بس فودا بس فودا بس فودا بس فودا بس فودا بس فود با اول شب اه اول شب ماه اول ولا برستندگان ولا روز the same as اول پرستندگان ولا روز the first of the worshippers. The last is poetical usage-

c. In compounds often used (کثیر الاستعمال) as, کثیر الاستعمان) as pomegranate; بدست water for the ceremonial ablution; نیشکر sugarcane; ابدست a night attack; سک sag-ábí a seal, &c.; for ملی مشکر آبدست, کلنار وزبازار (pr. the lustre of the face) honor, روزبازار rúzbázár, the flourishing state of the market, flourishing circumstances.† Many of these words are even written in one word.

† Both words are wrongly marked in Vullers' Dict. with the Iszáfat. In poetry, of course, they have the Nímfathah.

Similarly, II. p. 759b., ارگیا kár i giyá, which be translates rex; but كارگيا or better كار كيا, with the Iszáfat, means regnum, the business (كيا of a كيا (not prince; but كيا) without the Iszáfat, (for كياييكار) means rex, and the derived abstr. n كاركيائي regnum. It is plain that this abstr. noun could never have been formed from Vullers' كارگيا kár i giyá rex.

Reversely, بادشرطة, p. 163, must have the Iszáfat, bád i shurtah, as correctly given in Johnson. Vullers' remark regarding the Iszáfat, on p. vii. of his preface, has no senso.

^{*} The pretty little linen draper, the pretty little butcher boy. As our poets speak of Jane of the mill, the fair dairy maid, &c., so do modern Persian poets speak of pretty boys belonging to the Trade.

The Kasrat-i-Isti'mál explains also the omission of the Iszáfat in names; as, غلام حسين Ghulám Husain, for Ghulám-i-Husain.

d. After بن bin son; as, (Sa'dí) اتابك ابوبكر بن سعد زنگى Atábak Abubakr bin Sa'd i Zangí.

This is not absolutely necessary in prose. The Persians use even the form إبن, with the alif, when followed by the name of the father. Hence it would not be wrong to say, ابو بكر ابن سعد زنگى Abúbakr ibn i Sa'd i Zangí.

- f. After a hidden 8 (های صختفی). This is poetical usage, and not found in modern poets; as, بازار خمیره مندل, جشمه نور جامه خواب کوچهٔ بازار خمیرهٔ صندل.
- g. Before ايزد God; as, بنام ايزد banámízid (سپاسايود), سپاسايود), مفاعيلن sipásízid, the praise of God. This is poetical usage.
- h. After تەبسىط as تەبسىي tah basít, for tah i basít, the dust below a mat; تەجرعة tah jur'ah, the last of the cup.
- i. After the preposition زي درگه تو zí towards, as, و zí dargăh i tu (Mír Mu'izz), towards thy throne, for زي درگاه تو does not occur after Sa'dí.
- k. In كافرنعمت káfar ni'mat, ungrateful ; ثالث ثلاثه sális salásah, a Christian (Niz).
- 1. After من I; as, من بنده من رهى, من كياني من كياني من رهى من بنده This occurs sometimes in poetry for من بنده man i bandah, I your slave. The word رهى does not occur after the time of Jámí.
- m. After nouns ending in alif or waw. Thus, هُلَاكُو ملعون haláfiú mal'ún the accursed Huláfiú, امينا هروى Aminá Harawí,* for هُلاكُوى ملعون and ماينا , which would not be wrong.

VI.

I conclude this paper with a few notes taken at random from marginal remarks made by me to several Dictionaries at the time of reading. If it be not presumptuous on my part, I would point out that

* The Alif at the end of proper nouns is modern Irání usage. Thus أَفُكُ , النَّف , أَنْكُ , مَا يُدِا , مُخْلَصًا , تقيا أَنْ عُلْ , وَانْصُ , أَمَا يُدِا , مُخْلَصًا , تقيا notes such as the following in form of an index, ought to accompany the Persian text of every book now-a-days printed; for the compilation of a reliable Dictionary, based upon a knowledge of the Persian language, must necessarily be the work of many.

این شهر را آبادات کود Cultivated. You say این شهر را آبادات کود he built this town. Also, این شهروا بنام خویش آبادات کود he built this town and called it after his name.

أبجوش ábjósh gravy. Also, dried raisins. آبجوش kishmish is a smaller kind. منقى munaqqa is the best kind of dried raisins. مويز mawéz is a general term, dried raisins.

آدم هفت هزارى Adam i haft-hazárí. People say that the number of inhabitants on earth at the death of Adam, had reached the number of seven thousand.

آزردك Vullers and several inferior Indian Dictionaries maintain that azurdan is wrong, and azardan correct, as the word is a contraction for فشرد, پپرمود (غناردك) غناردك آزاردك آزاردك). But شهرد فناردك المعاريدك shumurdan, شهردك shumardan and شهردك , شهاريدك مساريدك مساردك , شهردك , فشاردك , شهردك , فشاردك , شهردك , شهردك , فساردك , شهردك , شهردك ,

آرامیدن آرامیدن aramidan, transitive and intransitive. You say دل خود را بدان نیارامم , or, دل من بدان نیارامه

نه ds, a millstone. You say غلمرا اس كردك to grind corn.

صيب áséb, corporeal pain. درد dard, both corporeal and mental pain.

and برآغازيد to begin. The word is constructed with the accusative, or with مع r.

formed from Arabic and Persian nouns. Examples:—طلبيدن to require, عارتيدن to understand, وقصيدن to dance, غارتيدن to plunder, غارتيدن to swallow down, فارتيدن to rise (sun), فوتيدن to die (Túránian usage), عمويدن to go to Mecca, مدينيدن to go to Madínah, عمويدن to visit the tombs of 'Omar and Abúbakr, بابابكريدن the same as

* For ابو بکریدن . The form with the Alif occurs frequently in this name Similarly ابویزید báyazíd, for ابویزید abú yazíd, the famous saint of Bistám.

the same as چرافیدن , مکر کردن the same as مکریدن , ورنگ کردن the same as دیریدن , ویدن the same as دیریدن , ویدن the same as ریدن کردن the same as سیفیدن ,بسمالله گفتن the same as بسم اللهیدن ,سیف زدن the same as ماه شدن the same as مهیدن

ز سوزش آفدابيدم مهيدم چو او سيفيد من بسم اللهيدم

to get up, and از خواب درآوردك to get up, and از خواب درآمدك to rouse up. We might expect برآمدك bar-ámadan, but this is not idiomatic. Nízámí,—برامد زشيرينه خواب. So also AA., p. 251, l. 3.

المنطقة. The compound د آويختن means to fight and to make fight. Vide A.A. p. 205, l. 9. The nouns آوين áwézah and أوينش áwézah mean a fight, a battle. Also, a fight between animals.

مَا فَعْهُ مَا الْعَالَى مَهُ الْعَالَى مَعْهُ الْعَالَى مَعْهُ الْعَالَى مَعْهُ الْعَالَى مَعْهُ الْعَالَى مَ of Ghazní. He is proverbial in the East for his faithfulness. The form ayáz is the usual form. There exists a Masnawí by Mauláná Zulálí of Khwánsárí, entitled Mahmúd o Ayáz. Huzní of Içfahán (metre Ramal) adopted by Akbar. Also, one's duties, official work; as, اگر کوتوال إگر کوتوال ithe manner of governing adopted by Akbar. Also, one's duties, official work; as, اگر کوتوال i'If there be no kótwál, he (the collector) will perform his duties. The plural اُئینها means orders, laws, the same as احکام; as, صقدس as, احکام i'muqaddas, the orders of the king. Hence the áin (singular) i Akbarí is divided into several áins.

گرایاز اینجاوگر محمود کارش بندگیست عشق از یك رشته پای بنده و آزاد بست "Whether it be Ayáz or Mahmúd, here (on the path of love) his duty is slavish obedience; love ties with the same string the foot of the slave and the freeman."

اتصاف ittiçaf. This word is constr. with بنه and بنة. You say بتقوی اتصاف داشت he possessed piety.

الگه atkah, or الگه الگه atgah, a foster father. The latter form of this Chagatái word is given in the Calcutta Chagatái Dictionary. As kókah and كوكه kókah and كوكلتاش kokultásh, a foster brother, it often occurs as a title. Thus اتگهخاف atgah khán, the name of Shamsuddín Muhammad, whose son, Khán i A'zam Mírzá Kokah, was Akbar's foster brother.

مي ahkámí, adj. In Indian writers the same as نجومي $nujúm_{,i}$ referring to Astronomy. Thus تاریخ احکامیان, the same as تاریخ منجمان , the same as تاریخ اعتدان túríkh i munajjimán, the era of the astrologers.

ارشد arshad, superlative of رشید, often used by Indian writers as an epithet for a son.

ارتك artak. The form اورتک irtak also occurs in MSS. A quilted horse-cloth. The word which is often used by Indian writers, is explained in the AA., p, 142, l. 19, as a چهینت پنبه اصود, a piece of chintz stuffed with cotton.

artak i kajím, or according to the Chagatái form, ارتك كجيم artak-i-kejam, the quilt upon which the coat of mail of the elephant is placed. AA., p. 124, 1.3.

asp. The form اسب asb is the Iránian form. It occurs in the Bostán in rhyme with سبد kasb, whilst no Persian poet would rhyme kasb with asp. The Iránian Surúrí quotes also several verses, where it is rhymed with زرگشسب, which itself stands in the فصل الف مع باي تازى.

The Indian Madar gives distinctly با باي فارسي. Mírzá Ibráhím in his grammar has everywhere asb.

which word is also used by Indian writers. Fir'aun was the first that bred mules. The belief in the East is that the mule is not sterile, but dies in foaling. Hence a mule is compared to a man who is liberal beyond his means. Khusrau (metre Muszári')

جود جواد هر چه نهذاتیست مودن است استر بمدرد از کرد چون مادیان کشد

"If the liberality of a liberal man is unnatural, it is his death, just as the female mule dies when she brings forth a foal."* Observe also that the metre requires the omission of the Tashdíd in the word kurah. In accordance with this idea, farmers are said to place a over the vulva of the mule, in order to prevent gestation, a practice to which Kháqání several times alludes. Thus in the Tuhfat ul 'Iráqain, in speaking of the sun, through whose agency all metals and precious stones are called into existence, he says (metre Hazaj)

"Through thee (O sun), the vulva of the mule is closed with a lock

^{*} This corrects the reading in Vullers' Dictionary, II. p. 826.

(or ring) of gold; and through thee the neck of the ass has an ornament of rubies.

i aghyár, plural of غير. The word occurs used as singular, a rival. Hayátí of Gílán (metre Ramal)

از هوس اهل هوس خصم همند دوستی را هیچ کس اغیار نیست "Inconstant lovers are hostile to each other on account of the inconstancy of their love; in true love no one has a rival." Vide بالموس bulhawas. Similarly, اعدا a'dá, pl. of 'aduww, occurs used as a singular. 'Umar i khayyám (Rubá'í)

مى ميخورم ومخالفان از چپ و راست گويند مخور بادة كه دين را اعدا ست چون دانستم كه مى عدو دين است و الله بخورم خون عدو را كه رواست چون دانستم كه مى عدو دين است و الله بخورم خون عدو را كه رواست "I drink wine, and opponents from the right and left cry out to me, 'Don't drink wine; it is the foe of faith.' Since I have learned that wine is the foe of faith, I must drink the red blood of the foe; for this is lawful." In the third migrá' we have to pronounce 'aduww, and in the fourth 'adú.

مقدُّس aqdas. In Indian writers the same as royal. So also مقدُّس muqaddas and ذات قدسي qudsí. ذات قدسي dzát-i-qudsí, the royal person.

الزام ilzám, c. دادك, كودك, to make a thing lázim or compulsory; hence to force, to overcome, to defeat in play. So also, ملزم كسي شدك mulzim-i-kasé shudan = غالب شدك. 'Ursí (metre Ramal)

چون ببازیچه شوم ملزم ارباب کلام خندهٔ جوهر فرد است دلیل نقسیم "When by way of play I defeat the literary writers (who hold the doctrine of the jauhar-i-furd, i.e., the atomic theory, which the hukamá do not), the jauhar i-fard (here = the mouth of the sweetheart) smiles, and proves the divisibility, (because the lips in smiling divide)."

الماس álmás, a diamond. The idea is prevalent in the East that diamond dust is a deadly poison. Faiszí, (metre Ramal)

نوش داروی محبت رام پرس اجزاکه چیست سود الماس در زهر هالالل میکنند "Do not ask to know the ingredients of the antidote against love; they mix diamond dust into a deadly poison."

mughilan, the babúl tree, a kind of acacia. The pronunciation mughailán, given by Burhán, is unsupported; the word occurs in rhyme with فيلان filán elephants. The ashes of mughilán wood are largely used in the East for refining gold and silver, whilst the thorns of the tree have become proverbial; hence fig., the dangerous obstacles on the road of love. Çairafí of Sáwah (metre Hazaj-i-sálim)

ز راه کعبه مهنوعم وگرنه میفرستادم کف پائے بزحمت چینے خار مغیلانش "The road towards the ka'bah (of love) is forbidden; else I would gladly direct thither my feet, not caring for the wounds which the sole of my foot would get from the acacia thorns of the road"—in allusion to the law which prohibits Muhammadans from sleeping with their feet stretched in the direction of Mecca, which would be disrespectful.

Judáí of Tabríz (metre Munsarih)

حسن بقان كعبة ايست عشق بيابان او سرزنش ناكسان خار مغيلان او "The beauty of the sweethearts is a ka'bah; love the desert (through which the wanderer has to pass); the obstinacy of the wretches (the رقيب, the watcher), the acacia thorns of the road."

وإجب الوجود imkání, adj., human, referring to man. God is وإجب الوجود necessary; man is ممكن الوجود mumkin ulwujúd, possible; idols are ممكن impossible. Hence كوششهاى امكانى human efforts.

اندرین andarín, pr. in this, within this. This word is, however, often used as a preposition, within = اندر Observe that in this case it cannot take the اضافت bindbar, or نظر برین nazar barín, on account of. Payámí (metre Mujtass) anfusí o áfáqí, referring to the spiritual (anfusí) and to the visible world (áfáqí). Hence mard-i-afusí o áfáqí, a man who looks upon life as something agreeable, but who at the same time strives to grasp the idea of Godhead. Such a man is both تجردي ta'alluqi, attached to this world, and تجردي tajarrudí (or بالمنتقع wárastah) independent of it. A.A. p. 49, l. 17.

بچارسوي مرادے فقاده ام که هنوز بچاه يوسف من به که اندرين بازار 'I am living in a world where my Yúsuf would be better in the pit than in the bázár,''—where Yúsuf = life, the pit = non-existence, the bázár = existence.

انگشتري بازي angushtarí bází. The players sit in a circle and pass on a ring. The person standing in the middle has to find the ring. If he says to one پوچ póch, empty, whilst that person has the ring, he is burdah, defeated, and must continue searching for the ring. Vide Vullers' II., p. 802, s. لي kuchah. Tashbíhí of Káshán (metre Hazaj)

دو دست این جهان و آن جهان پوچ کچه پیش منست این پوچ وآن پوچ "Both worlds are empty and have nothing concealed in their hands; I have the ring (of true love); every thing else is empty."

ايل فا. Indian writers use this word in the phrase مركشان ايل شدند the rebels became again obedient. MSS. have often وايل wáil, pres. part. of وايل wa-l.

الِيهِ éman. The fathah of the mim is the same as the fathah in káfar, Hátam, &c., for káfir, Hátim, whilst the first syllable is a common Imálah. Hence the word is a corruption of مُن مُن مُن مُن مُن مُن مُن أَصْن مُن اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهُ اللهِ اللهُ ال

ب

باختن bákhtan, 1, to play; 2, to lose a game, opp. بردك burdan to win a game. Shikébí of Içfahán (Rubá'í)

نردے است جہاں که بردنش باختنست نرادی آن بنقش کم ساختنست دردے است جہاں که بردنش باختنست بر داشتنش برای انداختنست درای انداختنست برای انداختنست "The world is a nard play, the winning of which is a loss; skilful nard playing consists in being satisfied with a low throw. The world resembles the two dice of the nard play—you take them into your hands to throw them down again." Payámí (metre Ramal)

هرچه بازد باز بستانه سپهر بدقهار با حریفے کین بدیها کرد نقران باختن "Fate cheats in play and takes back what it lost; one cannot play with a companion that practises such tricks."

Observe that in the first example, the word نقش naqsh means the dots on the dice. The dice used in India are rarely cubical, but long, because the four long sides only are used.

بارگیر bárgír, the same as اسپ asp, and بارگیو بارگیر بارگیر علی bárgír, the same as بارگیر علی بارگیر یاد. A slave, Hind. چیله chélah, Muç. Bh. 3. حرف بارگیر (metre Muszári')— چون حرف بارگیر زیاد و مکرر است and merely repeated." Compare تكيئً كلام, which has the same meaning. bázár. This word is often used in the sense of a noisy place. Havátí of Gílán (metre Ramal)

كوي عشق است اين سرِ بازار نيست لب به بند ايلجا زبان دركار نيست

"This is love's lane, but not a bazar; hush, you must not talk here." جرمانه bázyáft, stoppages, a fine. Synonyms are, ناویافت táwán, جرمانه بازخواست wasza', and وضع gharámat, غراصت sarshikan, سوشكن wasza', and The last word is a general term and may also mean a demand for rendering a satisfactory account; روز بازخواست róz-i-bázkhwást, the day of reckoning; بازخواست سركار والا bázkhwást-i-sarkár i wálá that which is due to the state; hence taxes. قوان ,غرامت , جرمانة signify a fine; you say وضع and بازیافت; جرمانه گرقتن از کسے mean مله ماههٔ سائسان stoppages, deductions from salaries, &c. You say three months' wages of the grooms are deducted; the fifth part of the monthly ينجم حصة ماهيانة از امير وضع شود عاصل باندازهٔ کاهش بازیافت نماید ; allowance of the Amír is stopped the collector makes a deduction according to the difference in weight in بازیافت چاکر (of coins brought by the peasants). The meaning Vullers (from Richardson) is doubtful. Sharshikan is generally used in the sense of military stoppages to which a whole squadron is condemned. For example, A.A. p. 283, l. 13:-

چون یکے بِ بارگی شود بر همرهان سرشکی نموده سرانجام کند "If a trooper be found to be without his horse, he (the faujdar) gives him a new one, charging the price to his squad in equal proportions."

pol the centre, برانغار برانغار rangár, the left wing of an army. These are the usual spellings. Other forms are بورانغار búrángár, ابرانغار burungár, as in the Chagatái vocabulary published at Calcutta, and بورانغار brángár (as in Zenker's vocabulary). For چورانغار, we also find بورانغار, júrangár, with a jím. Vullers' form چورانغار juwángár, with a wáw, is not in my dictionaries. Another Turkish word often used by Indian writers, is جرفتی charkhchí an avantguard; a foraging party. As the article in Vullers, p. 569, has no sense, I transcribe part of the article in the Muçt. and Bh.

چرخچى ډر عالم آراي سكندر بيگ فوج هراول الخ

"The word charkhchi occurs in the book entitled 'Alam-ara, by Sikandar Bég, in the sense of fauj i haráwal, an avantguard. Asr (metre Hazaj)

اگر آوازهات در روزمیدان چرخچی گرده صخالف میشود مغلوب اهل دین با سانی "If on the day of battle thy voice is the avantguard, the opponent is easily defeated by the Muslims." From some commentary I have copied the following passage—

چرخچی بمعنی فوج که از لشکر جدا شده برای آوردن اسباب ضروری و بهندی کهی گویده ۱۱

Hence a foraging party. As Vullers did not understand Bh., he might have left out his etymology. The word is connected with the T. چرك chirik and چرك chirik, vide Vullers, I. p. 572.

The T. بلوک bulók, a troop, is likewise of frequent occurrence; only the pl. is not bulókán, as in Vullers, but بلوکات bulókát.

burd o búi, or بردوباي burd o púi, or بردوباي búi o burd. This word, which is often used by Indian Historians, means betting on fighting rams or other animals. The margins of MSS. generally explain it by the Hind. هارجيت, which has the same meaning. I do not know the meaning of باي bái. At the courts of the Mogul emperors betting on animals was carried on to a great extent. Akbar had to pass several limiting laws.

الم الموهبي barhaman. In the poetry of Hindustan and the later poets of Persia, the Brahmin is enamoured of the منم çanam, in the same way as the nightingale of the rose; the atom (قرف) and the chamelion (قرف) of the sun; the فاخته من sarw; and the moth of the candle. The following verse is sufistic (metre Ramal)—در حقیقت نسب عاشق و معشوق یکے است بوالفضولان عنم و برهینے ساخته اند در حقیقت نسب عاشق و معشوق یکے است بوالفضولان عنم و برهینے ساخته اند In reality there is no difference between the lover and the object loved—idle thinkers speak of the idol as distinct from the Brahmin." The verse requires the pronunciation barhaman, not brahman or barahman.

be more correct to say dromedary. The Bactrian camel with two humps (موغور بغري dokuhání) is called in T. بوغور ,or, بوغور ,or, bughur. The latter word is used by Indian historians, but is often confounded in the MSS. with the Arab بعير ba'ír. Zenker's Turkish vocabulary gives the plena scriptio بوغور, but he translates a dromedary, instead of a Bactrian camel.

بالهوس بالهوس bulhawas. It is wrong to derive this word from the P. prefix بالهوس bul much, as some Indian grammarians and lexicographers have done, whose opinion Vullers adopts. It is another spelling for بوالهوس. This is also confirmed by the fact that but bulhawas occurs, and not bulhós, whilst hós is a Persian taçarruf of the Arab. hawas. Again, the few real Persian compounds with bul are all ancient.

The personel of Persian love poetry consists of the معشوق, the معشوق, the معشوق the مدعي raqib (or مدعي or مدعي mudda'í) who watches over the ma'shúq, and lastly, outsiders. Among the latter are those who are غفل عثمان غفلنا عثمان غفلنا عثمان غفلنا عثمان غفل عثمان غفلنا عثمان غفل الموس bulhawas, who possess no عشق hawas. 'Ishq is معربيع الزوال batíuzzawál constant; hawas is transient, عبريع الزوال batíuzzawál, though passionate.

بيش از صد بار; از more than a hundred times. But از may be left out, when بيش stands after the numeral; as صد بار بيش more than a hundred times. A hundred times. A hundred times more would be صد بار ديگر gad bár i dígar.

پ

pái. In pre-classical Persian we never find پاي , بوي , روي , پاي , شداي لا بالمساب كرد و بالمساب ك

y páo gósht. What Vullers has copied from Richardson is wrong. The word means \(\frac{1}{4}\) flesh, and is the name of a regulation of the emperor Akbar by which he wished to determine the fatness, or otherwise, of an animal in proportion to the quantity of food given, vide A.A. p. 163. پال is Hind.

پرچه parchah, for پارچه. This form I have only seen in Indian writers. The author of the Mir-at ul 'alam uses it frequently.

پرده پرده pardah means 1. a screen; 2. the place behind a screen; hence پردهنشين a woman of good family; عرده behind the screen; 3. the thin membranes in limes, pomegranates, &c., vide A.A. p. 80, l. 6. As بارده so does also پرده زمانی take the meaning of the king's court; hence, in Indian writers, پرده زمانی the adorning of the court, doing something for the pomp of the court. pardah darí a tearing of the screen, the exposure of a secret; A.A. p. 198, l. 20.

پريدك parrídan and parídan. To fly. Also, to evaporate (scents). Similarly بوي او ديرها از جامة رود its smell remains long in the clothes. Scents, colours are ديريا dérpá, lasting, fast.

pusht khár, a hand made of ivory and fixed to a stick. This instrument, which is very common in India, is used for scratching (خارید) one's back. A larger kind of this instrument is used as a war club, in which case the whole, or only the hand, is made of iron; vide A A. p. 122, l. 1. The shape of the hand is either fist-like, or half extended with the fingers bent. خاریشت is, of course, a back with khárs or scratchers, hence a hedgehog. Observe that in the Indo-Germanic languages the last component of a compound expresses its genus, and the first its particular properties.

Other compounds of pusht are پشتانگ pusht tang, i. e., something tight for the back; hence, a broad girth for fixing the saddle, A.A. p. 143, l. 3. The word is given in Vullers, on p. 364, but his spelling pushtank is wrong. پشتانی pushtgarmí, support, assistance. Sarmadí of Içfahán (metre Mujtass) يلاسي palás, the coarse stuff used for making moneybags. The adj. پلاسي palásín, made of palás, as كيسةٌ پلاسيدن. The same distinction holds for عندي and ماغذي ; آهنين and كاغذي , &c.

In Vullers' article جعفري, p. 517, the third meaning is the same as the fifth; Shakspeare's etymology from ضفيرة is wrong.

péchán, 1. twisting; 2. twisted. The passive meaning seems to be the usual meaning. Sanjar of Káshán (metre Rajaz)

"(I come from the monastery) with the cord tied round the waist, and the gong under my arm." Vide another example in Vull. I. p. 597, l. 1. Similarly شناستا shindsá knowing, and pass., known, as شناستا; but the passive meaning is rare; vide A.A. p. 284, l. 7; پذیرا pidzírá, accepting, and accepted.

پير پنبغ pír i pambah a scarecrow. Vullers' meaning is unsupported.

ييمانة paimánah. The paimánah is larger than the بيمانة.

...

itábín, Inf. II. of ابن ; vide Lane's Ar. Dict. p. 9. c., a leading on, the same as يبروي pairawí. Indian Historians use this word as an ism i fá'il, پيروي کننده , a leader, pl. تابيات tábínát leaders, officers; vide A.A. p. 191, l. 17; p. 193, l. 1. تابيان tábín báshí a superior commanding officer, p. 196, l. 20. Thus also often in the Pádisháhnámah.

^{*} Vullers has s. ييارة a reference to betah; but botah is not a creeper; it is a plant capable of standing without support.

مورن táríkh. Native lexicographists derive this word from مورن muarrakh, which is supposed to be corruption of the Pers. مالاورز máhrúz, or مالاوروز máh o rúz, an era, calendar; Germ. Zeitrechnung. Others derive it from the Arab. اراخ irákh, the wild cow (gáw i wahshí), an animal proverbial in the East for its stupidity. They then explain táríkh as meaning the removal of stupidity, hence rendering certain, fixing anything.

The custom of fixing the táríkh of an event by a word, or sentence, or a migrá', or a whole verse, is said to date from the sixth or seventh century of the Hijrah. Before this, meaningless words were used composed of the hurúf i abjad. Thus in the case of Abú Síná, the Nigáb uggibyán (vide above, p. 7, No. 65) has the following verses—

"Abú 'Alí Síná was born in شجع", "A. H. 373, finished his studies in شحام, or 391, and died in تكز, or 427. Such táríkhs are no longer used. The modern táríkhs are either مطلق muţlaq, or تعييه ta'miyah. The former kind extends over a whole miçra' or verse, as جهانگير از The latter kind may be جهان عزم سفركرد. The latter kind may be خارجى dákhilí, when something is to be subtracted, or كاخلى داخلى داخلى داخلى tharijí, in excess, when something is to be subtracted, or نام داخلى داخل

الف کشید ملایک زفوت اکبر شاه

in which the words فوت اكبرشاء give A. H. 1015; but as the maláik subtract one alif, we get A. H. 1014. The phrase الف كشيدك, or يالف كشيدك, is explained by the authors of the Muct. and Bh. as referring to a custom of lovers, dervishes, mourners, &c., to cut the skin of the chest, the wound having the shape of an alif.

nám i táríkhí, an additional name which parents give their children, in order to remind them of the year in which they were born—a very necessary thing in the East, where few people know their correct age. Thus, if a Muhammadan be born A. H. 1255, he may assume the name of مظهر علي Mazhar 'Alí, in addition to his own name, as the value of the letters when added will be found to be 1255.

تبوت tabar, an axe, a hatchet; also a war axe. If the war axe has the shape of a pointed wedge, like the bill of a bird, it is called زاغنول zághnól, pr. a crow-beak. If the zághnól has joined to it a common axe, the weapon is called تبرزاغنول tabar zóghnól. If the axe has an anvil-like piece of iron attached, it is called تبرتخماق tabar-takhmág, from the T. تبرقهاق a hammer. Under زاغنول in Vullers, II., p. 106, a., read et securis bellicae, for et sagittue bellicae, the Delhi edition of Bh. having wrong تبر سرتيز tír i sartéz, instead of tabar i sar-téz.

a cash keeper. Akbar had for his household a تحويلدار كل tahwildar is household a تحويلدار كل tahwildar is household a تحويلدار جز tahwildar i بلاار جز The latter furnished workmen, the people of the Harem, &c., with money for which they took receipts. The tahwildar i kull stood under the خزانچي كل khizanchi i kull the Treasurer General. خزانچي tahwili deposited, handed over (money); hence a deposit. خزانچي fil i tahwili, a new elephant waiting to be handed over to the officer in charge of a خلام ماليم halqah, (elephants which have the same value). The word تحويلات pl. بتحويلات, or تحويلات, means also a deposit; a "transfer" of money.

VII.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

Page 5.

In the name of the fourteenth dictionary read مسين husain, for مسينى husainí.

. ضمير instead of , ضمير , instead of , ضمير

Page 6.

The author of the forty-first dictionary is often mentioned in Indian historians. He was, according to Badáoní, Qází of Delhi.

In the title of the fifty-third dictionary translate:—"The Dictionary of Muhammad ibn i Hindúsháh Munshí who wrote to the praise (بنام) of (the Amír) Ghiás uddín Rashíd." It would be against the idiom to translate:—"Who wrote under the name of Gh." This would be expressed by در شيدى Observe the final نام المعالى الم

'Alí Qulí Khán. Native Persian scholars in reading these words, draw the word من to the preceding name, without the اضافت; as, Khánzamánnám 'alíqulíkhán. But if the title be a word which cannot take the form of the maçdar, khitáb is constructed as mukhátab; e. g., which would be impossible. Thus also with the word عضد الدولئ ; you say, Arzú takhalluç, Sirájuddín Khán, الرزو تخلص سراج الدين خال . We should invert the order, according to our idiom, and say, Sirájuddín Khán, poetically styled Arzû; or, in the above example, 'Alí Qulí Khán, alias Khán zamán. But when the Persians put the takhalluç after the real name, they use the أضافت 'Umar i Khayyám, 'Umar, poetically styled Khayyám.

The author of the fifty-eighth dictionary, Shamsuddín, poetically styled Fakhrí, belongs to Içfahán.

After the sixtieth dictionary add عرهنگ منصور اسدی الطوسی Ad., FJ., Sur. This is Firdausí's ustád. The author of the second dictionary is the nephew of this Mançúr. It is remarkable that FJ. quotes this ancient dictionary as his authority for the forms ارثنگ, with a ...

Page 9.

Line 5 from below, read printed, for lithographed. This edition of the Kashf, when obtainable, sells from fifteen to twenty rupees.

Page 11.

Line 5; in the second migrá', read بود búdé, for بود búd.

Page 12.

The author of the Farhang i Jahángír, Mír Jamáluddín Husain, played a more important part during the reign of Jahángír. According to the Akbarnámah of Abul Faszl, he entered Akbar's service during the twenty-fifth year of his reign, or about 1581. When Abul-Faszl wrote the Aín, the Mír was a Hazárí, or commander of one thousand, not a nuhçadí, as the reading of the first note on p. 226 of my Aín appears to be more correct than the reading of the text.

The excellent work, entitled مآثر الاصوا maásir ulumará,* contains the following biographical notice—

^{*} Vide Morley's Catalogue, p. 104. The MS. No. 77 of our Society, to judgo from the corrections, looks like an autograph. Besides it is almost free from mistakes. It contains 574 leaves. The other MS. of our library, No. 131, is much inferior.

مير جمال الدين انجو انجوية از اعيان سادات شيراز اند نسب ايشان بقاسم الرسي ابن حسن ابن ابراهيم طباطبائي حسيني ميرسد، مير شالا محمود و مير شالا ابو تراب از اكابر متأخرين اين طبقه بوساطت مير شمس الدين اسد الله شوشترى صدر ايران در زمان شالا طبحاسپ صفوى اولين بشيخ الاسلامي فارس و دومين باقضى القضائي آنجا اختصابي يافتند و مير جمال الدين از بنى اعمام ايشانست و بولايت دكن وارد شد و حكام آلجا مراسم احترام و بزرگ داشت بجا آوردلا نسبتى هم درميان آوردند و پس ازان بهلازمت عرش آشياني رسيده سال سي ام بهنصب ششصدى امتياز يافت بهلازمت عرش آشياني رسيده سال سي ام بهنصب ششصدى امتياز يافت منصب رسيده بود چون در آخر سال پنجم قلعه آسير مفتوح گرديد عادل شالا بيجاپوري خواهش نمود كه دختر خود را بعقد شاهزادلا دانيال در آرد و ميره آگريا رسيده بيداري اساز خواستگاري روانهٔ آن ديار ساخت مير در سنهٔ يكهزار و سيزدلا بر كدار گذار اندك نزديك پتن جشن طوى آراسته عووس را بشاهزادلا سپرد و خود بآگري رسيده و پيشكش كه تا اين زمان بدين خوبي از دكن نيامدلا بود از طرياد شاهي گذرانيد و

چون با شاهزادلا سلطان سليم خصوصيت تام داشت پس از جلوس بمنصب چهارهزاري ومرحمت نقاره و علم پایه برتر افراخت . هنگامیکه سلطان خسرو از أكره بغي ورزيد مير باصالح دسقولي يافت كه أنجه ملك بميرزا محمد حكيم ر متعلق بود سلطان متصرف شود . او از كم خردي و تيره بختي راضي نشد . چون دستگير گشته با رفقا بحضور رسيد حسن بيك بدخشي كه مدار عليه مهمات او شده بود الحضور جذت مكاني زبان دراز ساخده گفت كه نه من تنها رفيق بودم همة امرا كة ايستادي انه درين كار شويك انه ديروز مير حمال الدين إنجو كه بمصالحت امدة قول منصب بنجهزاري أز ما كرفقه، مدر رنگ رو باخقه وست پلچه گشت * خان اعظم بِ باكانه عرض كرد كه عجب حضرت كه گوش بر سخن این فضول دارند . او میداند که صرا میکشند جمعے دیگر را هم ایجانب خود میکشد . شریك غالب درین امر مذم بهر عقوبت که سزاوار باشم باید رسانید * پادشالا ازین حرفها اعراض کردلا بهدر دلاسا فرصود پس ازان اجمکومت صوبةً بهار نامور كرديد * و در سال يازدهم الخطاب عضد الدولة بلذدنامي يافت * مير خلجر موصعے + که خود در بيجاپور سوکاري نمودی بالاي دسته ياقوت زردے در كمال صفًّا با اندام نصف بيضةً مرغ نشانه و بياقوتهاي فرنگ يسند و زمردهاي کهنه خوش آب و رنگ بطرح نظر قریب زینت افزوده بود از نظر گذرانید ، کنجاه هزار روبيه قيمت أن مشخص شد *

مدتے در پرگنهٔ بهرایج ^{محال} تیول خود گذرانید • ازانجا احضـور آمده باجل طبیعی در گذشت *

^{*} The following words are verbally taken from the Iqbálnámah, ed. Bibl. Ind., p. 87.

مير بكمالات ظاهري آراستگي داشت * نسخهٔ فرهنگ جهانگيري كه درين في بسيار معتبر ونزد همة سند است ازوست * الحق در تحقيق الفّاظ و تعين اعراب مساعي شكرف بكار برده * پسر كالنش مير امين الدين با پدر تعين دكن بود بصبيلة خالخانان عبد الرحيم منسوب گشته لختے ترقى كرد و در عين جواني در گذشت و میر حسام الدین مرتضی خان پسر دومش جداگانه درین اوراف مذكور شدي *

"Mír Jamáluddín Anjú, of Anjú, belongs to the Sayyids of Shíráz, who trace their descent to Qásim arrasí ibn i Hasan ibn i Ibrahim i Tabátibá i Husainí. Mír Sháh Mahmúd and Mír Sháh Abú Turáb, two later members of this renowned family, were appointed during the reign of Sháh Tahmásp i Çafawí, at the request of the Chief Justice of Persia, Mír Shamsuddín & Asadullah of Shúster, the first as Shaikhulislám of Persia, and the second as Qází-lquzát. Mír Jamáluddín is one of their cousins. He went to the Dekhan, the Kings of which had frequently intermarried with the Anjús.* Afterwards he entered Akbar's service, and, in the thirtieth year, was appointed a commander of six hundred. In the fortieth year of Akbar's reign, he was promoted to the rank of a Hazárí. It is said that in the end of Akbar's reign he was a commander of three thousand.† When in the forty-fifth year of the emperor's reign, the fort of Asír had been conquered, 'Adil Sháh, king of Bíjápúr, wished to enter into a matrimonial alliance with Akbar, and offered his daughter to Prince Dányál. To settle matters, Akbar despatched the Mír to the Dekhan, who, in A. H. 1013, after making, near Pattan, the necessary preparations for the marriage feast, handed over the bride to Prince Dányál. After this he repaired to Agra, in order to lay the tribute and the presents before the emperor, the best of all which up to that time had come from the Dekhan."

"As the Mír had always been a particular friend of Prince Salím (Jahángír), he was promoted after the prince's accession to the post of a Chahár Hazárí, and obtained the privilege of the naggárah and the flag.§ When Prince Khusrau (Salím's son) rebelled, the Mír received the order, to effect an understanding by offering Khusrau

^{*} So also Firishtah.

[†] If this is correct, it must have been after Abulfazl's death.

[‡] Accompanied by the historian Firishtah. § To sound the naqqarah, and to have a flag carried before oneself, was a distinction only given to great amírs. The aurang, chatr, sáibán and kaukabah are reserved to kings. Vide AA. p. 45.

the kingdom, which Mírzá Muhammad Hakím (Akbar's brother who had held Kábul) had governed. The Prince unfortunately did not agree. When he was subsequently made prisoner, and brought before the emperor, Hasan Bég of Badakhshán, Khusrau's principal agent, impudently said to Jahángír, that it was not he alone who had favoured Khusrau, but that all the amírs present were implicated; Mír Jamáluddín, the emperor's ambassador, had only the day before asked him (Hasan Bég), to promise him an appointment as Panjhazárí. The Mír got pale and confused, when the Khán i A'zam* fearlessly advised the emperor, not to listen to such absurdities; Hasan Beg knew very well, that he would have to suffer death, and tried therefore to involve others; he himself (the Khán i A'zam) was the chief conspirator, and ready as such to undergo any punishment."

"This satisfied the emperor; he consoled the Mír, and appointed him afterwards Governor of Bahár. In the eleventh year of Jahángír's reign (A. D. 1616), he received the title of 'Aszaduddaulah.† On this occasion the Mír presented to the emperor a dagger, inlaid with precious stones, the making of which he had himself superintended, whilst at Bíjápúr. At the top of the handle he had a yellow yáqút fixed, perfectly pure, of the shape of half an egg, and had it surrounded by yáqúts, as approved of by Europeans, and old and clear emeralds, so as to make it more conspicuous. The value was estimated at fifty thousand rupees."

"After this he lived for some time at Baraitch, where he held lands granted to him by the emperor. He repaired once more to the capital, where he died of a natural death."

"The Mír was a man distinguished for his talents. The Dictionary, entitled Farhang i Jahángírí, which is everywhere highly valued, and referred to as the best authority, was compiled by him. The author has indeed shewn a most admirable carefulness in his critical investigations, and the correctness of the vowels."

"Of his two sons, the elder, Mír Amínuddín had been with his father in the Dekhan, and was married to a daughter of 'Abdurrahím, Akbar's Commander-in-Chief; he was promoted to a higher post, when, at an early age, he died; the younger, Mír Husámuddín Murtasza Khán, has been mentioned before."

^{*} Vide AA. p. 223, No. 21.

[†] Vide Toozuk i Jahángírí, ed. by Sayyid Ahmad, Allygurh, 1864, p. 175.

*-: The Tuzuk i Jahángírí gives the following additional particular مير عضد الدولة چون بسيار پير و صنعنى شدة از عهدهٔ سامان و لشكر و جاگير دمى تواند برآمد اورا از تكليف خدمت و تردد معاف داشته حكم فرمودم كه هر ماه چهار هزار روپيه نقد از خزانهٔ عامره مى گرفته باشد و در آگره و لاهور و هر جا مرضي او بوده باشد اقامت گزيده آسوده و مرفه الحال بسر برده بدعاى ازدياد عمر و دولت اشتغال نمايد *

"Mír 'Aszaduddaulah having now (A. D. 1621) become very old, and bent from old age, he is no longer fit for employment in the household, the army, or the administration of a jágír. I excuse him therefore of all further trouble, and give hereby the order, to pay him out of my treasury the monthly sum of four thousand rupees cash, payable at Agra, Lahore, or any other place, where he likes to reside, so that he may be happy and comfortable, always praying for the welfare of my kingdom."

The highest rank which the Mír attained, was a brevet Panj-hazárí (پنج هزاري ذات), with an actual command (and salary) of a Sihhazár o pánçadí.†

Towards the end of his life, he seems to have revised his dictionary. As late as 1623, he presented a copy of it at the eighteenth anniversary of Jahángír's accession. The writer of the latter part of the Tuzuk says:—

^{*} Sayyid Ahmad's edition, p. 327, med. Major Price's translation of the Tuzuk i Jahángírí mentions Mír Jamáluddín on soveral places; but the imperfect MS. used by him, renders his translation useless. Major Price's MS, to judge from the translation, resembles the bad MS. of our Society, No. 1339 (واقعات جهانگيري).

[†] Sayyid Ahmad's T. i. J., p. 156, l. 3.

[‡] Sayyid Ahmad's T. i. J., p. 359, l. 7.

As it is then settled that Mír Jamáluddín is a Shírází,* we can understand, why he has given so many words belonging to the dialect of Shíráz, a few of which may be found in the B. and Vullers.

Page 22.

Line 21. For بباى read بباى; and l. 2 from below, read 'Abd ul Ghafúr, for 'Abdul Ghafár.

Page 24.

Line 7 from below, read ăbái, for ábái.

According to Tadzkirah by Sarkhush (last chapter), 'Abdurrashid discovered that the following verse of the Qorán (Sur. iv. 62)— اطيعوا الله و اطيعوا الرسول و اولى الاصو منكم contains the tarikh of Aurangzeb's accession.

To page 27.

Sirájuddin in the preface to the عطيه كبرئ gives a list of some of the books written by him.—

خيابان شرح گلستان 1. شكوفهزار شرح سكندرنامه 2. شرح قصائد عرفی سراج وهاج ^{مم}حاکمهٔ شعرا 3. 4. سراج منير اجوبة اعتراضات ملا منير . 5 در اشعار بعض متأخرين رساله ادب عشق در تحقیق ادب عشق 6 معيار الافكار در قواءه صرفيه و نحوية 7. فارسي مثنوي ٔ جوش و خروش بمقابله ٔ سوز و .8 گداز مالا نوعي مثنوي سوز وساز دربرابر محمود و .9 ايا: ماك زلالي عالم آب در جواب ساقينامة مالظهوري. 10 مثنوی عبرت فسامه در تتبع قضا و قدر 11. ملا محمد قلى سليم ديوان غزل مشتمل برينج هزاربيت . 12 نثر پيام شوق در جواب مراسالات اعزه . 13 گلزار خيال در تعريف فصل هوائ . 14

^{*} Mirzá Nausha calls him (50ia .

To this long list, we have to add the works mentioned on pp. 25 to 27; the مجمع الفائس majma' unnafáis, a tadzkirah of Persian poets, alphabetically arranged according to the takhallue; * and the نوادر الفاط nawádir i alfáz, a dictionary of those Hindí words whose equivalents are rarely met with in Arabic and Persian.

Page 30.

Line 21, read fifteen years' labour, for fifteen years, labour.

Page 32.

Line 4. Read 17, for 27.

Page 39.

Line 15. I do not know, whether Jannatástání, or Jannatáshyání, or both, be correct. In some historical books both terms are used promiscue, in many áshyání, in others ástání. In the MS. of the Maásirulumará, mentioned in the note of p. 65, áshýaní has every where been carefully corrected to ástání. Even in Akbar's laqab, I have found ástání, for áshyání. There is no doubt that áshyání conveys a better meaning, than ástání. Line 5 from below, read of Akbar's mother, for of one of Akbar's wives.

Line 3 from below, read teacher, for pupil. The pious are attracted by God.

Page 37.

غازى الدين له To the Indian pronunciations mentioned in i., add غازى الدين ghazí uddín, for gháziddín; ديدار بخش Dídárbakhsh, for دار بخش baghichah, for ياغيچه bágchah. The Indian pronunciation سنجاف, for سنجاف, is said to be Chagatái.

* The MS. of our Society, No. 129, goes only to the letter ζ hé; nor do I know, whether Arzú completed the work. I may mention that this MS., to judge from a marginal remark which the binder has half cut away, is written by Sayyid Ghulám 'Alí of Belgrám, Arzú's nephew. He was himself a poet, and Arzú has mentioned him under his takhalluç Azdd.

From this book, it also appears that the Surmah i Sulaimání, the twenty-fourth dictionary of p. 5, was compiled by the poet ເລື່ອງ , Taqí Auhadí of Içfahán, the well-known author of a Tadzkirah. He came to India during the reign of Jahángír (1605 to 1627), and must not be confounded with the poet Taqú, of Shustar, one of Akbar's nobles; vide Λ. Λ. p. 230, No. 352. The concluding chapter of the Mir-át ul'Alam gives a few of their verses.

Page 44.

Line 2, read follows, for ollows.

Line 11, read برينش burinish, for يرينش yurinish.

Page 45.

Line 20, read آبرة dbrah, for برة

Page 50.

Line 19, remove the asterisk after the word kóh.

Page 53.

sórish. سورش sózish, for سوزش sórish.

In conclusion I may mention that this paper is an extract of a larger work written by me, entitled "Contributions to Persian Lexicography." About six years ago, Major Lees asked me to compile a Persian Dictionary. A part of it has been completed. But as the costs of the undertaking appeared too great, in proportion to the assistance which the Government of India then granted, the work was not proceeded with, though a specimen sheet had been issued.

Since then I have been comparing the Persian Dictionaries written by natives, and correcting various lexicographical MSS. in my possession. I trust in a short time to have sufficient leisure, to see the whole of my "Contributions" through the press, though I should prefer the compilation of a Persian Dictionary itself, if the Government or a learned Society were inclined to defray the printing charges.

H. Bl.